Some Woes on Women

There is something deeply disturbing about the attitude toward life of the modern North American woman.

Men haven't really changed much, basically, since Julius Caesar and his boys crossed the Rubicon. They still like to make war and make love; they still drink more than tea; for them, they still like playing games better than improving their property; they still have some romance and illusion in their souls; they still loathe facing up to family problems in lit the tube with their mates.

Take a modern politician, drapes his in a toga, and he'd be right at home in the senate of ancient Rome. Take a modern general, hang a suit of armour and a helmet on him, stick him on a horse, and you wouldn't know him from a Crusader of the middle ages.

But take a modern woman out of her modern kitchen, away from her walk-in-wall broodroom and dump her in a thatched-roof cottage with outside facilities and what would you have? A screaming meemie; that's what you'd have. Even if Mr. and Mrs. Will Shakespeare lived in the thatched cottage next door.

This comment is written more in sorrow than in anger. I don't put all the blame on the creature themselves, I think their greedy materialism, relentless reality, and total lack of appreciation of the finer things in life — like their husbands — are a result of the stresses of the age. Too much warmed-over psychology. Too much hard-sell advertising.

They all want to look like Paris models. But they don't do enough physical work and they eat too much. So they get fat. There's a stress right there.

They all want their children to be handsome and brilliant. So they spend thousands of dollars straining the kids' eyes and teeth and pushing them at school and nagging them about muscle tone and comparing them unfavourably with kids who are handsome and brilliant. Their own kids, naturally, respond by getting fat and pimply, heading braces and glasses, growing neurotic and falling their oxen. Another stress.

They all want their husbands to be a combination of Richard Burton, J. P. Morgan, and Caspar Milquetoast. That's a little rough to come by these days, so they take it out on the grab bag. Frustration and guilt. Two more stresses.

They crave security. More and more of it. So they push their men harder and harder to build up a bigger and bigger estate, and more and more insurance, in order that they can join the hordes of lonely widows in Florida, sitting around talking each other what a grand chap poor Herman was before he worked himself to death 30 years ago.

They all want to be loved and cherished. And they spend all their time complaining about their health, their children, their husbands, and all the things other women have that they don't. Who's going to love and cherish a walkie-talkie with a built-in whine.

They all want to be beautiful. And they all go around with lips pressed tight, mouth turned down, and a big scowl. When was the last time you heard your wife singing, Jack?

There's only one solution, of course, for the girls, and it would not be a popular one. The answer is back to the scrubboard and the sewing-machine, the vegetable garden and the preserving kettle.

I would not have you think these few observations are offered in an unkindly spirit. They are merely the result of overhearing a conversation to-day between my Old Battleaxe and her side-kick across the street.

For half an hour, they vied with each one in relating, with chapter and verse, what useless articles Bill and John (incidentally, two of the sweetest guys in town) turned out to be.

Businesswomen Plan Fund For Workers' Education

Mrs. Doris Blair, Newmarket, Regional Advisor of district 4, was the guest speaker on Monday evening to the Business and Professional Women at the final meeting of the season at the North Halton Golf and Country Club. As well as bringing the members up to date on the Federation legislation and activities she installed the officers for the coming season.

Mrs. Jean Mackenzie is past president; Mrs. Gladys Alken president; Mrs. Maureen Walker and Mrs. Lorene Sanford are vice presidents; Miss Jean Rudell, treasurer; Mrs. Ada Wilkinson, corresponding secretary and Miss Marlon McKean recording secretary.

Mrs. Maureen Walker, the club delegate to the Saint St. Marie provincial conference in April, gave a very clear and interesting report of the business enacted there and Miss Jean Mackenzie, who also attended, gave the highlights of the social affairs at the successful conference.

Since this was not primarily a business meeting the only actual business was the voting of the members on paying their assessment of three dollars per member, for two years, for the setting up of a trust fund for the use of promoting extraordinary educational and other projects and programmes for the education of members of the Federation and for women in Canada to fit them for responsibility and office in organizations, communities, public service and in business and professional life. This is a Centennial project and it is expected that the interest from this money will have far reaching effects on the furtherance of education for the working woman.

In bringing the meeting to a close the president wished everyone a happy and safe summer.
