Seek Winter Works Grant To Check Dutch Elm Bug

Elton Region Conservation Authority may have work crews cutting down and burning dead elm trees if it is able to get a winter works grant. The authority decided on the project Thursday after hearing replies to a protest letter from three government ministers and Premier John Roberts. It also put a second iron in the fire by deciding to urge county council to make the burning of dead elm trees mandatory. If the authority's program gets off the ground, it will be a lead in Ontario in combatting the deadly dutch elm disease. It would be the first authority in the province to have such a project. In addition, it would be the first organization to have subsidized under the winter works formula. The authority decided to embark on the project after it learned the province has no program to check the disease. "The province isn't doing

Moore, Milnes Aboard Comet In Air Show

Georgetown people among the swarms of stiff necked spectators watching the air show at the Canadian National Exhibition were probably not aware one of the most vital operations was being handled by a fellow-resident Trevor Moore of 3 Weber Drive. Mr. Moore, an air traffic controller at Toronto International Airport, was controller for the two day show and the take-off, flight course, and landing of aircraft taking part in the show was his responsibility.

Because of their association with the show M. Moore's wife Donna and their four daughters, and friends Mr. and Mrs. Ken Milne and their three girls were invited to ride in one of the show aircraft.

They were aboard the British Comet when it made its pass and steep climb demonstration on the second day of the show.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore were guests of Toronto Mayor Phil Givens at his dinner for air show people Friday night September 10 in the King Edward, and also attended a cocktail party as guests of the Royal Air Force participants at the Skyline Hotel during the week-end of the show.

Social Worker Finds Child Badly Beaten, Charge Father

A former Georgetown resident told a magistrate's court Wednesday she had beaten her five year old daughter because she was hard to manage. The 32 year old father of three who moved here from Montreal in February, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm. Magistrate R. Black reserved judgment for six months. The child was placed in a foster home as a ward of Italian Children's Aid Society when a social worker noticed she had been severely beaten. Dr. Edward Graham, an Oakville pediatrician said he has never seen such extensive bruising on a person's face. He said the left side of the little girl's face was a mass of bruise, her left ear was swollen, her left eye blistered and so bruised it was nearly shut. In addition he noted older bruises to her back, right arm and groin where he said it appeared she had been kicked. The accused said his daughter doesn't get along with other children and doesn't listen to him or his wife. He stated that she had run away from home many times. The child was removed from the home after a social worker was called by the mother who objected to the child's beatings. Mrs. Tams Klein stated the child's left side of the child's face was swollen and fiery red when she visited the home June 10th. She said the child was frightened and talked only in monosyllables. She said she removed the child the next day and placed her with a foster mother on a farm near Acton. The first evening there the girl bled from her injured ear, for a doctor's examination

BELL LINES by Arnold Blachford your telephone manager

MEASLES AND THE TELEPHONE Everybody knows that measles bring spots, but how many people know that measles brought the first telephone numbers into use? Way back in 1870, when a measles epidemic hit the town of Lowell, Massachusetts, a local physician named Dr. Moses Greely Parker realized that if the town's four operators came down with the measles, telephone service would come to a halt. Dr. Parker suggested that numbers be used instead of the names of the 1200 Lowell subscribers, so that substitute operators, if they were needed, could learn to operate the exchange as quickly and easily as possible. We're not told whether or not the regular operators ever did come down with the measles, but we do know that numbers have been a very important part of telephone service ever since!

THE DIRECTORY AND THE TELEPHONE Early editions of telephone directories were usually just lists of people in town who had telephone service, with an explanation of how to crank the phone to get the operator's attention. But not anymore! The pink pages in today's phone books are filled with lots of useful information: numbers to call in emergencies, for telephone repair service, for assistance on calls, and to order new services or changes. They give instructions for speeding your Long Distance calls, and a list of Area Codes. These 'how to' pages are there to help you get top value from your telephone service.

TYCOON-TO-BE Here's a little story that should warm the heart of any Georgetown businessman: A small-town boy went into the neighbourhood drug-store to use the pay phone. The druggist could not help overhearing the lad's side of the conversation, and it was a model of smooth salesmanship. "Dr. Jones? Doctor, do you need a hardworking boy to take care of your lawn? Oh, you already have a boy. Is he good... I mean does he really know his job? Are you satisfied with his work? You are? OK then... thanks anyway." The druggist couldn't help expressing his regret. "Too bad, Jim. Sorry you didn't get the job." "Oh, I already have the job," was the cool answer. "I was just checking up on myself!"
