TIPS FOR HAPPY HUNTING

It's no use. I just can't hold out any longer. It's that time of year again. And what would you do if, from all across the land, thousands of letters were pouring in from anxious wives, imploring you to reprint your Hunting Safety Tips?

Hundreds of women today owe a happy widowhood and a subsequent happy remarriage to Smiley's Hunting Safety Tips.

But it's not just the women who want the tips reprinted. Many a veteran hunter has written to tell me that he owes his life to a careful perusal of them. Here's one such testimonial.

"Dear Smiley: I owe my life to a careful perusal of your Hunting Tips. Last fall, I was lost in the bush. For the first two days and nights, I didn't worry, because I'd done everything in the standard manual. I didn't panic. I changed into dry socks, as they suggest. I looked at my compass and my watch regularly, which told me I was lost and what time it was.

"But as night drew down for the third time, I became discouraged. I thought of my wife and kiddies. Yes, that's how discouraged I was. Suddenly, I remembered your suggestions for lost hunters. You had told us, if lost, to panic like hell, run wildly through the woods in circles, shout at the top of the lungs, pray like an archbishop, fire the rifle madly, and if all else failed, set fire to the bush. I tried it and it worked. I was rescued within 15 minutes. I fish my term for arson this month, and am looking forward to meeting you in the woods.

"That gives you an idea of how impractical the ordinary hunting rules are, and how down-to-earth are mine. That chap might be in there yet, changing his socks and gawking at his compass.

"Well, let's get on with the tips, revised and brought up to date. On one thing, I am in full agreement with the old-fashioned safety rules. It's the one which says, 'Never mix gunpowder with alcohol.' Ever taste it? Ugh! The reason for that rule is that some hunters will drink anything.

"Never shoot at a partridge that resembles your hunting companion, even if it's sitting in a tree. He may have a perfectly good reason for perching on that limb.

"It is considered unsporting to shoot tractors while the farmer is riding on them. And, of course, it is considered dangerous to shoot at farmers. They have a nasty habit of shooting back, and are crack shots.

"It is bad form to criticize your ducks, especially when they are a hot shot. The ducks are the best. . ."

Always carry a few hand-grenades along from your belt. They come in handy when you arrive at a hard-wire fence you can't get over, under or through.

Never take a chance when you approach fallen game that you have wings. The rabbit may be playing possum. You can avoid a nasty kick right on the hunting boot if you pump about five more shots into him.

If you hear something that sounds like the snarling cough of a lion, don't shoot. It's probably your hunting partner, enjoying his first cigar of the day.

Never hand a gun across a fence or into a boat with the muzzle pointing toward yourself. Always make sure it's pointing at the other fellow.

Do learn to operate your safety catch. It's humiliating, in the field, to have a deer walk over and lick your face while you're struggling with it. And it's embarrassing, at the inquest, when you have to admit you don't know when it's on, and when it's off.

Just a few simple rules to take the tedium out of plodding about a swamp with a dirty great musket. Good hunting, chaps.

The newspaper is the only medium people consult for a buying decision.
