

OVERCROWDING FORCES POLICE BEHIND BARS

Georgetown police officers have been forced to 'do time' in their own cells because of the cramped quarters situation at the police department office which is the subject of recent council discussion. The problem is an offshoot of an Ontario Police Commission investigation early this year which brought a recommendation that the force be almost doubled in strength. Since then the force's manpower has been upped, close to the required 15 members, but while action on new police quarters hangs fire, the officers find it a tight squeeze especially when changing shifts. At left P.C. Vandersluis does some of his necessary paper work at a card table in one of the police cells which has become an emergency office. Below, a scene that is repeated daily when off duty officers check out and the incoming men take over. An increased volume of paper work has also meant more files and with more bodies and a Telex machine, space is at a premium. The force is utilizing corridor space as well as a cell in an attempt to get breathing room. New police quarters was the first recommendation on the Ontario Commission's list.

How to Select a New Electric Dryer

Ideal drying days are possible every day of the year with an automatic electric clothes dryer. The homemaker with an electric dryer is free of the frustrations of adverse weather.

Hydro's Home Service Bureau suggests the following points are worth considering when you are choosing your new electric clothes dryer.

All automatic electric dryers have five essential parts: the tumbler drum, where clothes are placed while they are being dried; a fan to move the air through this drum so that evaporation will be more efficient; an exhaust vent to remove moisture from the air once it has passed through the drum; a motor to drive the fan and rotate the drum; and an electric heating element. Warm air will absorb more moisture than cold air and is therefore more efficient.

When a load of wet clothes is put into an automatic electric dryer, these five essential parts work together to dry the clothes. The fan circulates air through the drum. This air is first directed over the electric heating element to raise the temperature, then channelled through the drum where the clothes are tumbling. As the air absorbs the moisture from the fabric, it is exhausted outside the cabinet.

To make the basic drying process more efficient and automatic for the homemaker, many features have been added to the electric dryer since it was developed 25 years ago. No single model is available with all these features. You must decide which ones will be the most useful for your family.

- Fabric selectors or dial settings which regulate the heat for different types of fabrics.
- No heat cycle which fluffs and airs such articles as pillows and blankets, and removes dust from draperies and slip covers.
- Two speeds of tumbling, regular and gentle.

- Automatic drying control which stops the operation of the dryer when the laundry has reached the pre-set stage of dryness.

- 'Safety start' switch which is an important feature for families with small children. When the door of an operating dryer is opened and then reclosed, the dryer will not start again until the 'start' button has been pushed.

- Condenser which removes part of the moisture in the air exhausted from a dryer. This is a useful feature if laundryroom humidity is high and outside venting is not practical. Water collects in a container which must be emptied after use.

- Automatic sprinkler which dampens clothes.

- Ultra-Violet ozone light which gives a fresh, sunshiny aroma in laundry.

- Interior light which operates only when the door is open. Check to see if light bulb can be replaced easily.

- Burner or bell which indicates the dry has stopped operating.

- Glass panel in door.

- Decorative colors, as well as white, for exterior finishes.

Electric clothes dryers take most of the work and all the frustration out of laundering, by ensuring ideal drying day the year round.

St. George's Delegate Tells of Church Union Synod

What has been termed a 'revolutionary' meeting of Canadian Anglicans was described by John T. Armstrong when he spoke from the pulpit Sunday morning in St. George's Church.

Mr. Armstrong was one of eight delegates from Niagara Diocese to the synod in Vancouver this fall.

The synod discussed two questions of major importance to the church, a proposed union with the United Church of Canada, and a new approach to the question of remarriage of divorced persons in the church.

Mr. Armstrong told the congregation his interpretation of these matters, as well as giving other highlights of the synod.

His talk was part of the annual laymen's service at the church when, members of the Brotherhood of Anglican Churches conduct the service. Lessons were read by Murray Henley and John Elliott, Syd Pratt recited the state prayers and Thomas Kasow sang parts of the choral matins service. Sidesmen were Ken Robertson, Ernie Pearce, Charles Harris and Walter Kiehn.
