Three GDHS Teachers Hear Retiring Prexy

Three Georgetown District High School Teachers, Michael Peleschak, Glen Emerson and Mrs. John Glynn, representatives at the local secondary school at the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation annual assembly in Toronto last week. Mr. Peleschak is president of the Ontario body.

They heard the retiring president of the OSSTF, Mrs. Phyllis Monkman, express concern about the possibility that educational research may become too remote for teacher participation when she addressed the assembly.

Miss Monkman, a teacher in Etobicoke, told the 380 delegates which represented 22,600 members that it was "most important to have an organization to which individual teachers might turn for assistance in setting up a special study, regardless of their background knowledge of research."

She noted that, the Ontario Curriculum Institute had been established at the request of the Ontario Teachers' Federation and supported mainly by the teachers and the Ontario Board of Education — but the OCI is due to merge with the new Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, established by act of the Legislature.

Since the new Institute will be supported entirely by the government," said Miss Monkman, "there arises the problem as to what extent the teachers may avail themselves of the resources of the Institute, and

Langdon Urges Bolder Measures to Curb Crime

Magistrate Kenneth M. Langdon of Georgetown presented a hard-hitting address advocating revolutionary approaches to curbing crime in Halton County when he spoke at the opening of a new Magistrate's Court in Oakville's municipal Centre, on Monday.

Dignitaries from the attorney-general's department, civic officials, leaders of the Halton bar, senior police officials and many prominent in Halton County life, heard Magistrate Langdon review the makeshift accommodations provided for over 22 years for magistrate's courts in the county and his hope for a new era stemming from modern court facilities now available.

But he did not mince words. "I cannot speak too highly of the efforts made to rehabilitate those who appear in court at every level," said Magistrate Langdon. "I am satisfied that every assistance is forthcoming, but frequently too late."

Seriously Concerned
"I am seriously concerned about commitment to provincial institutions for long periods of time of seriously disturbed youngsters of sixteen, seventeen, eighteen and nineteen that I believe are beyond redemption," he continued. "These youngsters are acting out a real grievance against society and, never having been trained to submit to control or direction at the parental level, refuse to accept it from any other source."

"On behalf of this group I respectfully suggest that the approach is through the parents and not the child."
Marriage Age
"I have felt that it might be a simple matter to restrict the license to marry to those who are willing to assume the responsibility of parents; that no one under the age of 18 should qualify, and that no one under the age of 25 should be granted a license until they have completed a course of instruction and satisfied some authority that they appreciate the responsibility of marriage; and that they produce a savings account of at least $500 as a mark of good faith."

to what extent teachers may expect to participate in the determination of curriculum and educational policies which it may bring forward.

"Since, too, the new Institute embraces the Dept. of Educational Research and the School of Graduate Studies in Education of the Ontario College of Education there is a distinct possibility that the facilities of these two bodies may be further removed from the classroom teacher."

Two bodies were still accessible to the teacher wanting to pursue a particular problem by means of a research project, she continued — the OSSTF's Secondary Education Commission and the Ontario Educational Research Council. The latter, she said, is playing a very important role in the way we meet the challenges of the changes in curriculum and educational thinking which are constantly confronting us.

Many teachers, said Miss Monkman, have met problems which they would like to try to solve, but have felt that their lack of knowledge of scientific research methods made it impossible for them to attempt a formal study. The OERC could help in this situation.

It would seem to me that we in OSSTF should continue to press for even stronger support of OERC in the future," she said, "so that there will be available to our members an organization which will be able to provide them with counsel, and recognition of their efforts, when a study has been completed."

She added, "It remains to be seen just how accessible the new Institute will be to the classroom teacher."

NOTHING DEFINITE ON MAIN-JAMES PARCEL
Public speculation goes on about the site at the corner of James and Main Streets where a familiar landmark, most recently Maval's Service Station, was levelled by a wrecking crew two weeks ago. And almost any of the speculations could be right according to Sandy Mackenzie, whose father Sam Mackenzie, operator of J. B. Mackenzie Lumber, and clothing store owner Sid Silver jointly purchased the choice commercial property.

Neither were available for comment at writing time, however Sandy Mackenzie informed The Herald that plans are still indefinite.

ince, and certainly these limits are not considered by all offenders.

Police Support

"No matter how dedicated or deserving these police officers may be, they cannot command respect among themselves or with the public they serve unless they are properly trained and equipped and unless they command a salary that will permit them to live on the same scale as their neighbours."

Recalling conditions as they were in Halton when he became a magistrate 22 years ago, Magistrate Langdon said that 1946 total cases in Halton numbered 408 and fines collected were $4,075. In the second, and full year's operation 1,107 cases were heard and $13,600 collected in fines. Halton's "case load" today is in excess of 15,000 cases annually, and fines collected total $275,476.

Court Costs

Court costs are set by statute but Magistrate Langdon said that he had "mentally" provided for the costs of such a service, "by the people who make use of it."

He added: "It seems such a simple matter to take a realistic approach to the cost of operation and to defray the same by including in court costs a sum of $2 or $3 on every offence carrying a penalty of $25 or less and a sum of $5 or $10 on every offence carrying a penalty in excess of this amount. In this way an annual revenue between $30,000 and $50,000 would be paid by those who ruin a foul of the law, and avoid the added penalty to those who are providing the money for this building."
