Stress Fire Dangers On Halloween Night
 Halloween night, that eerie night when the children love to dress up and go "trick-or-treating," presents many fire hazards and the Halton County Fire Prevention Bureau is concerned for the safety of local children.
 This month, for the first time, the Bureau is distributing 2,000 Halloween safety posters to remind parents and children of the fire dangers connected with the annual October 31 celebration.
 The posters feature a two-colour picture of a witch stirring a cauldron of "brew" and the poster lists four common ingredients for a "witches' brew of Halloween trouble."
 — Children playing with matches
 — Children wearing flammable costumes
 — The use of candles instead of lights; and
 — Leaf fires left smouldering at night
 There have been few Halloween incidents here in recent years, but the Bureau hopes the reminders on their posters will help to prevent any mishaps that might spoil a fun-filled night for some child.
