

Crest Hardware Owner Had Long Career In Merchandising

One of Georgetown's senior businessmen, James Richardson, died in Georgetown hospital on February 17.

Mr. Richardson who was 92 on New Year's day, had been active in business until his 90th birthday, as operator of the Crest Hardware.

Born in Pickering, he was the son of William V. Richardson and Sarah Cornell. His great-grandfather Ezra Cornell, founded the university which bears his name in Ithaca, New York.

After graduating from high school in Whitby, Mr. Richardson attended the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and operated two drug stores there after he graduated. Returning to Pickering in 1906, he was a grocer there until he moved to Georgetown in 1928.

Since then he had been a hardware merchant on Main Street, joining the Crest organization a few years ago and doubling his store to take in the adjoining premises which had been Farnell's grocery.

In Pickering he served as a school board member for several years and had been master of the Odd Fellows Lodge. In Georgetown he had been a member of the area board and president of the intermediate hockey club, and a member of the curling and lawn bowling clubs. He was an ardent fisherman and enjoyed a game of golf.

He was a member of the Society of Friends.

He leaves his wife, Florence Gibson, four children, Harold of Pickering, Walter, Kenneth and Isobel, Mrs. Fred Maveal of Georgetown, 13 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by a brother Walter of Philadelphia and sister Elizabeth of Pickering.

Rev. John McDermid of Brampton conducted the funeral service at the Harold C. McClure Funeral Home and interment was in Friends Cemetery, Pickering. Pallbearers were Bruce Richardson, James Squires and Kenneth Butt, Pickering, Ellwood Huyck, Cambridge, Fred Maveal and Douglas Richardson, Flower bearers were Kenneth Richardson, Pickering, James, Ronald and David Richardson, Donald and William Maveal.

Hope Parents Accompany Children to School Films

Harrison Public School Teacher Parent Association is hoping that parents of pupils in the Georgetown elementary school senior grades will go with their children to segregated films dealing with physical changes that accompany growing up when they are shown here.

A film entitled The Story of Menstruation will be shown in Holy Cross Auditorium Monday March 6 to which girls in grades 6, 7 and 8 have been invited.

Boys of grades 7 and 8 have been invited to view a film for them on Monday March 20 in the high school auditorium entitled Boy To Man.

Normally the showing of the films is alternated so that the film for girls is available one year and that for boys the next. They are both being presented this year because there was no film last year.

No child will be admitted without the signed consent of their parents or at least one of their parents in their company.

"We hope the parents choose the latter and attend with their children," Harrison Association president Mrs. Colter told the board, "that way they can discuss and enlarge on the film's message."

Mrs. Logan of the Halton Health Unit will speak to the girls as well on their night. At writing time a speaker had yet to be arranged for the boys.

School Board, Council at Variance On Plunkett

Georgetown District High School Board won't endorse the Georgetown Council's submission to the Plunkett report. At a meeting of the board Monday, Feb. 20, the members turned thumbs down on a written request from the council asking the board for its support of its submitted criticism of the Plunkett proposals.

Business administrator Ernest Forgrave was instructed to explain in his reply that the high school board "cannot endorse council's submission since many of its points are in variance with those expressed in the board's own brief."

Council has pleaded a case for "status quo" while the high school board favours a plan that would link Georgetown-Brampton school areas.

Being Police Chief is "Cold, Solemn, Serious Business"

Letter to the Editor: What It is Like To Be Chief of Police

No man can help feeling a certain sense of pride when he arrives at the point where his next step will be the top rung on his professional ladder. But there is something unusual about the top rung of the police ladder. It is the toughest job in the department. From down in the ranks, the role of Chief looks exciting and glamorous, but in actual practice, the Chief finds this position tense, tempestuous and sometimes traumatic. An applicant for this position needs to know that being Chief is an assignment of trust rather than glory. He will be respected rather than loved, tolerated more than honored, and often hindered rather than helped. Instead of running a popularity contest, he will be running a semi-military operation where life is often at stake and where human rights and human welfare are always at stake. It is a cold, solemn and deadly serious business.

It is also in the very nature of such an assignment to provoke a resistance and opposition. A Chief is under the continuing necessity of urging people to do what they know they ought to do, but resent having to do. This resentment reflects itself in criticism, rumour-mongering and sometimes outright character assassination. The Chief is automatically the main target.

Naturally, he will do everything in his power to keep criticism to a minimum, but to avoid it is impossible. Probably the most he can hope to achieve is the satisfaction of doing his work so well that somebody in spite of the sniping and criticism, the rumour-mongering will say, "Well, no matter what you think of our Chief of Police, at least you have to admit this: he's fair, he's firm, and he's honest."

In the glossary of law enforcement accolades, this is the highest compliment a Chief can receive. It means he has been awarded the profession's top Oscar.

R. HALEY, Chief of Police, Georgetown.

Christmas in February "It's a Mess" Gibbons

"It's a mess and looks like a lot of junk" said Mayor Gibbons Monday, asking council if they want to continue the Christmas street lighting all this year, as planned for a centennial feature.

The mayor said that many bulbs are out and that while the hydro commission would replace them, the commission doesn't favour the plan either.

Deputy Reeve Speight suggested that cutting the lights by fifty percent might be more effective.

"They look bedraggled now, but when the bulbs are replaced they will be colourful" remarked Cr. Bob Francis, as a motion carried to have replacements made.

Canada's first coins 5 and 15 Sol silver pieces were issued in 1670 by Louis 16th, king of France.
