Firefighters Shudder at Thought Of Approach of Grass Burning

For most people the month of April inspires thoughts of soft showers, budding trees, warm breezes, and the early posies. If you're a Georgetown firefighter it means burning grass, children with matches, burning grass, rubbish fires, and burning grass.

Another fire hazard that increases this time of year is over heated oil space heaters. Spring is just as bad as fall for this kind of fire because the owners are shutting them off on warm days and lighting them again when the temperature drops back.

oil and open the draft control in the pipe as wide as possible weighting it down to keep it wide open.

"It doesn't have to be that way every spring," says Georgetown Fire Chief Erwin Lewis. "We could be saved a lot of grass fire calls if people would take a few precautions."

"Trouble develops when the operator allows too much fuel into the unit before lighting," he said. "Flames fill the heater, it roars and makes unusual noises as it expands, and people panic."

When the flames subside to their proper intensity the fuel supply may be reopened, and the draft control allowed to return to its normal position.

Chief Lewis said children playing with matches, in most cases on other people's property give firemen their biggest spring headache.

"A solution of water and detergent, liquid or powder, can save trouble and expense if a live cigarette is dropped in chertified cushions, on a mattress or into any heavy upholstered furniture," Chief Lewis added.

The detergent allows the water to penetrate the materials. Most of the water taken directly from the tap will run off and end up on the floor.

"We can only get at the heart of this problem through the parents," Chief Lewis said. "We can tell moms and dads to keep matches and children separated and ask them to please warn them of the consequences of trespassing."

Chief Lewis advised anyone who finds himself with this situation on his hands to do two things — shut off the flow of

"If mixed in a pail or bowl and poured gently over the smouldering area it will have ten times the effect of soaking the whole piece with gallons of tap water," he said.

Oakville, Acton Girls Best in Public Speaking

Speaking on "Teenagers Long Hair" an Oakville public school pupil, Patricia Collins, won the Halton public speaking finals, March 17, Acton's Carol Patterson was second. Her topic was "Canada."

Ten contestants took part in the Halton finals in W. H. Morden Public School in Oakville.

Correen Cooper of Glen Williams and Alice Macintosh of Harrison Public School represented the Georgetown-Esqueving area.

Judges were William Pollen, head of the English department of Milton high school Joan Miesner of Georgetown high school's English department, and William Cotton, editor of the Oakville Journal-Record.

Contestants were from Halton No. 1 (Georgetown-Esqueving), Halton No. 4, Oakville and separate schools.

Halton's winners competed in the Ontario finals in Whitby Tuesday night March 21st.

Toni Treash, Sharon Laidler, Leanne Gilson, Brenda Garbutt, and Sandra P. Hendley who had earned their Golden Hand passed through the gate to Guide Land and were met by the Guide Patrol Leaders and welcomed into the Guide Company by Mrs. Tlueko.

Three Brownies, Darlene MacLoughlin, Lauren Lewis, and Brenda Dickenson also came into Guide Land by their Golden Slippers as they had earned the Brownie Golden Bar.

After the ceremonies the Brownies were invited to join the Guide Campfire. Gail Walsh, Guide Lieutenant, and Jane Collett, Tawny Owl, led the girls in many favourite songs.

Defines P-C Philosophy at Nonminating Convention

A 20-minute "pep talk" on the Progressive Conservative Party philosophy in Ontario, drew loud applause from the close to 400 delegates and supporters at the Tory nomination convention in Milton on Friday night, March 17.

Small in size but big in voice, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Citizenship Robert Welch excited the crowd with his dynamic approach to politics.

"A person is a Conservative because he wants to maintain the institutions of our country — you might say he wishes to conserve our heritage — and he is Progressive because he wants to raise the condition of people by means of national development and social justice," the speaker said.

"Our representation in the Ontario Legislature is certainly not maintained on any narrow based support, in fact we have 50 members who have a clear majority in their seats," he noted.

Stressing the importance of selling party policies, he said

Better Farming, by Better Farmers Today, Says Ag-Rep.

The Agriculture and Canadian Industries meeting of the WI was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Ruddle on Tuesday afternoon, March 21st, with the 1st vice president Mrs. John Ruddle presiding, and opening with the ode and creed. Roll call answered by "What part of the farm work should a varied wife do" and many and varied answers were given. But all felt hubby should have a certain amount of help from his spouse if a wife was at all interested in his life-work.

Some of our folks have been travelling this winter. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barnes enjoyed a delightful ten days in Bermuda. Howson Ruddle spent a month visiting different places down south. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cunningham motored to Daytona Beach, Florida and Mrs. Jas. Conroy went by train to Vancouver to her niece's wedding on March 10th and then visited other places before returning home.
