

Dog Nappers Operating

Resist That Urge to Let the Dog Run Loose

It's not as prevalent now as it was last fall, but dog napping is still causing many Georgetown dog owners to lose their pets! According to dog control officer George Herrington.

He says he can pretty well judge the extent of the dog napping by the number of calls he gets from owners whose pet did not come home. If the animal isn't at his Limehouse pound it's a good bet it has fallen into the hands of a dog napper.

He said the incidence of missing animals was quite heavy just before this past winter.

"These aren't necessarily dogs which have been allowed to run at large. Some have disappeared from the end of their leash if they happen to be tied where they can be seen from the road," said Mr. Herrington.

Nobody knows where the animals go after the dog nappers have them, but it's likely they end up in research labs.

The dog control officer advised dog owners to tie their pets in a place where they cannot be seen from the street if possible.

The warning comes in the middle of one of the worst times of year for dogs running at large. Mr. Herrington said March and April prove every year to be bad months for the control service.

He said this is partly due to people who have given their children puppies for Christmas, and are now starting to let them outside the house.

A Georgetown by-law says dogs must be kept from running at large. The fine is $5. at the door or $7. at the pound.

Dogs are kept at the pound for three days and if not picked up at the end of the three-day waiting period are destroyed.

Mr. Herrington estimated the number of dogs in Georgetown at between 750 and 800. of which well over 90 per cent have tags. Tagging is going on now. As well as identifying the dog as a licensed animal the tag is of great assistance to the dog control service in returning the pet to its owner. Mr. Herrington recommended owners also print their address on the dog's collar in case the tag is lost.

Speakers, Films to Take Conservation to Schools

The information and Education Advisory Board has started a program of education in conservation in the schools of the Credit River Watershed. Speakers and coloured slides are available to any group interested.

Floors showing CVCA projects are being prepared and will be entered in the Township of Toronto Centennial Parade on May 22. These floats will be changeable and made available for parades in the valley during the coming year.

A seminar, conducted by the Information and Education Advisory Board was held recently at Meadowvale. It was decided to hold two more of these to acquaint the members of various advisory boards with the work and aims of the CVCA.

LET'S PLAY BRIDGE

BY BILL COATS

Every so often, a hand occurs that is so much out of the usual that I can't resist writing about it in this column. The only trouble is that the hand is not too instructive, only interesting.

I'll present to you as a problem hand. Looking at all four hands, can you see a way to make all 13 tricks at no trump?

Here are the hands:

South

This hand occurred at a duplicate bridge game. The bidding was different at each table but six clubs or six no trump were the popular contracts. With both the heart and club finesses working, it is quite easy to make 12 tricks.

I'll give you one clue that may help you. There is a play at bridge that is called the Vienna Coup. This play consists of deliberately setting up a trick for the opponents and then squeezing them out of it.

Now before you read on, try your skill at making seven no trump. It doesn't really matter what West leads but let's say he led the queen of spades.

Now that you have worked on the problem, let's see if our solutions are the same. This is the first hand in which I have ever seen a double Vienna Coup. Thirteen tricks can be made by deliberately setting up 2 tricks for the defense.

Win the spade lead and lead the queen of clubs. If West covers with the king, you win with the ace, otherwise finesse the queen. Take a second club trick and then lead a heart and finesse there also.

BRIDGE CLUB

East-West: Mrs. Helen Atkinson, Cam Sinclair; Flora Smith and Lois Harbour; tied for third and fourth Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Warnes; W. Hamilton and F. C. Hamilton.

Now for the double set-up. Cash the heart ace and discard one of dummy's small diamonds. This sets up East's king of hearts. Take the ace of spades, setting up West's spade suit.

Now you can enter dummy with the diamond ace and start running your club tricks. When dummy is down to three cards, this is what it will look like.

When dummy leads the last club, East must discard. If he lets go of the heart king South's jack is a trick. So East must discard a diamond. South discards his heart and now West has a problem. He must keep the spade, else dummy's six is good, so he, too must let go a diamond. Declarer makes the last two tricks with the king and five of diamonds.

Monday's results: 1st pair: Less Silotas and Bill Coats; 2nd pair: Mrs. Jean Garrett and Mrs. Lil Cook; 3rd pair: Mrs. K. Campbell and Bob Dickson.

Museum Must Move Latest Edict of Conservation Group

Halton Region Conservation Authority has decided not to accept County Council's decision to leave Halton county museum on its present site at Kelso Park, northwest of here.

The Authority will make a new attempt to get council to reconsider its decision.

"Kelso is mainly a recreation area and the two don't go together," chairman Barry Humphreys of Burlington, the new provincial appointee, told the Authority Thursday.

But the comment met with stiff opposition from several members.

Allan Masson said: "I object strenuously to flogging that dead horse. In the opinion of many people it's right."

"How far do you take this thing?" he asked.

Mr. Masson said the authority the museum board and county council had discussed the matter and the decision had been made.

The Museum Board has voted unanimously to keep the attractive century-old building on the present site.

The board is ready to move on a $30,000 centennial building project there as well as the laying out of a botanical garden.

NEW BUILDING
The new building will house old buggies, sleighs, cars and other forms of early transport.

"It has gone through the democratic procedure, leave it alone for a while," added Mr. Masson.

Mr. Humphreys replied: "It's obvious from our staff and looking at the situation, that the museum, in the centre of the area, mainly a recreation area, does not belong."

Mr. Humphreys complained the Halton council made its decision public through the press before contacting the Authority.

He said it would be harder and harder to get the museum moved if more money was spent on it.

"Education is a very difficult process," commented Dr. Carl Martin, vice chairman of the authority.

William C. Sargent, protested at spending more money by moving the museum. He suggested that if the move was to be made a definite future program for its use should be laid before council.

"I can't see the point of flogging it again and again," Mr. Masson added.

OPEN SURE
Mr. Humphreys described the museum's position as "a sore in the side of the Authority."

Mr. Masson said he could not see how, if the museum remained on the site it would harm the authority or Kelso.

Mr. Sargent said the whole affair resulted in very poor public relations all round.

The provincial government has acquired land near the big Kelso Park area and it will be used as a site for an Ontario agriculture museum.

This site was the subject of controversy last year when it was revealed the Conservation Authority paid more for the property than real estate experts said it was worth. The Authority in turn sold the agriculture museum site to the province.
