Church 'Open Houses' To Foster Christian Relations

In order to foster better understanding among the churches in Georgetown, some congregations will be welcoming visitors to their churches on two Sundays in May, May 7, and May 14. The time for this Open House will be from 2 to 4 p.m.

On Sunday, May 7, Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church on Maple Ave. W. and Immanuel Lutheran Church, on Windsor Rd. will be open for people who would be interested in finding out more about these churches. On May 14, Knox Presbyterian Church, Main St. and St. George's Anglican Church, Guelph St. will be open for visitors.

Each church will offer its visitors a guided tour of their building, a summary of the type of service that is used, as well as an explanation of symbols and work found in the buildings.

It is hoped that such exchanges between Christians will help break down ignorance and prejudice between people of different religious backgrounds. All are welcome to visit these churches. It is hoped that more of the local churches will be open in the fall for such a program.

New Ontario Securities Act now law

Government action paces new responsibilities. This advertisement tells you what they are.

Important changes in the Securities Act, 1966, and in the Corporations Act became law on May 1st 1967. The new legislation will have far-reaching effects. It sets standards which everyone in the investment business must follow. It says exactly how certain vital procedures should be carried out. It demands a full range of information from companies offering shares to the public, and makes that information fully available to every interested citizen.

Here are five ways in which the Securities Act will help the people of Ontario.

Financial Disclosure The new Act requires companies to make a full report of their financial situation to the Ontario Securities Commission every year. These reports will be made available to the public.

Insider Trading Insiders of companies (senior officials and major shareholders) must now keep the Commission informed of their holdings in their companies, and must report changes as they take place. This information will be made available for public use.

Take-over bids New regulations govern the procedure to be followed when one company tries to obtain control of another by share purchase. They include a minimum period for which the offer is to remain open, and a 7-day period during which the shareholder approached may change his mind. Any investor involved in a take-over bid will now be kept fully informed.

Proxies Under the new Act, detailed information must be given whenever a company asks for a proxy vote, to be used on the shareholder's behalf. The shareholder must be told exactly who is to use his vote, and what his interest is. The company is limited in the way the vote can be used. The result will be to give the absent shareholder a more effective voice at company meetings.

The prospectus The way in which a company can describe new investments controlled by the Act. One important change is that the prospectus must now be written in simple, clear, no-technical language. Another requires the prospectus to be published in two stages, with a pause of at least ten days between the two. The preliminary prospectus is for information only; trading cannot begin until the final prospectus is published. The effect will be to give dealers and investors time to think.

Further information This advertisement gives only a brief outline of some of the more important changes in the Securities Act, 1966, and the Corporations Act. Nothing in the Act relieves the investor of the responsibility of making sound decisions based on good advice, but lawyer, broker, or other qualified investment adviser will be able to give you full information; or copies of the Act can be obtained from the Ontario Securities Commission, 123 Edward Street, Toronto 2, and from the Queen's Printer, 26 Broadbent Street, Toronto 5.
