Health Nurses Ask Queen's Park To Mediate Dispute

The Halton County health unit nurses have asked for a Lab-day. They said they were dissatisfied with delaying tactics of county officials in stalling off contract dispute with county officials.

Mrs. Flora Nesson said that she sent a letter directly to the Minister of Labor at Queen's Park on May 1.

Mrs. Hesson is the president of the Halton County nurses association.

The contract dispute between the 23 health nurses and the Halton county officials remains tightly deadlocked.

Mrs. Hesson said there has been no communications between county officials and her association.

The long drawn out dispute came to a head last September 12. The 23 nurses walked off their jobs in a group on that day. They said they were dissatisfied with delaying tactics of county officials in stalling off contract dispute with county officials.

The striking nurses stayed off their jobs for two months. Halton county officials agreed to re-open contract negotiations if the nurses returned to work. Last November the nurses returned to work but county officials broke off negotiations until the nurses obtained certification from the Ontario Labor Relations Board.

Although reluctant to get certified, the nurses did obtain certification. But the on-again-off-again talks were again broken off by county officials. They wanted the "grey listing" imposed on the Halton county health unit removed. For the nurses that was the last straw.

The nurses refuse to lift the "grey listing". Halton county officials refuse to return to the negotiating table unless it was lifted.

County officials accuse the nurses of bad faith in refusing to lift the "grey listing". Warden William Coulter maintained his special negotiating committee could not bargain with the "grey listing" hanging over their heads.

The nurses maintain county officials had repeatedly shown bad faith in the negotiations. They are emphatic that "grey listing" is the only weapon left to them. Mrs. Hesson said they

People Breaking Fireworks By-Law Will Get Their Fingers Burned

Under the strict town by-law regarding fireworks only on Victoria Day itself, can these squibs and roman candles sparkle, even in your own backyard.

For a special event, a regularly constituted organization may apply to the fire chief for a permit for a fireworks display, on another day, providing there is proper supervision.

Children under sixteen cannot buy firecrackers at all, while the bigger kids (adults) may only buy them during the seven days prior to the holiday. Storekeepers offering them for sale at other times than the seven days prior to and including the holiday may be fined.

The penalty for breaking any of the provisions is a fine of not more than fifty dollars, or if the fine is unpaid, not more than twenty-one days in jail.

Here are some do's and don'ts that may prevent a Victoria Day injury:

(1) Remember that your younger children will always be fascinated by fireworks and make a good audience, but they should NOT participate in the actual firing of the pieces. Older children should be taught to participate under adult supervision.

(2) One person should be in charge of the display.

(3) With the single exception of sparklers, NO firework is designed to be held in the hand when lighted.

(4) Read the printed instructions contained in each box of fireworks, and plan the order of firing in order to build up to the most spectacular display. Keep in mind that the firing location should be clear of overhead obstructions, trees or wiring.

(5) Assemble buckets or boxes of sand or a wheelbarrow filled with earth to be used as your firing base.

(6) Items such as roman candles and other long pieces should be buried at least halfway down in the sand in your container and set at a 10 degree angle from spectators.

(7) If containers of sand are not available, dig holes in the ground deep enough to bury the firework piece halfway up the barrel. Stamp the ground firmly around each piece before firing.

(8) In the unlikely event that a piece does not go off, do not attempt to relight it. Dispose of it in water.

(9) A glowing cigarette or cigar makes a good substitute for punk as an igniter. Hold same arm's length, apply to the wick and stand clear immediately.
