Kids Carnival Nets
Hospital $5.40 Cash

A carnival in an Elizabeth Street backyard, run by ten and twelve year olds, netted Georgetown hospital $5.40.

There was a wide variety of entertainment, some of it not too comfortable for the target.

The wet sponge toss, for instance, saw Trevor Window the target of wet sponges, with the winner the one who hit him square in the face.

Paul Tobin of Ewing Street ran the "throw the bottle cap into a tin can" concession, while Tony Pacheco of Elizabeth Street supervised the paper plates being tossed through a circle. The circle was a bent coat hanger.

Ring-a-Duck was just what it sounds like, only the duck was rubber, and Gary Tobin ran that one.

The indispensable refreshment booth was run by Ann Da Costa, and Mary Pacheco, while Diane Hennessey looked after the penny sale.

The idea to turn the money over to the hospital was eagerly endorsed.

Calf Club Practices

The seniors discussed the importance of performance testing to the success of a farmer. Bruce Pickering, Murray McCaig, Rosemary Booth, Carol Swackhamer, and Stuart Nurse were elected as the display committee for Milton Fair. After the meeting, refreshments were served by the Norringtons.
