Here is another hand from the Spring Nationals at Cleveland. This one is on overtricks but these are vital at duplicate bridge.

Opening lead: King of diamonds

North South were using the Drury convention. Since many duplicate players open light in third and fourth position, Drury is used to check if opener was light or not.

Thus North's two club bid asks partner if he has shaded his opening bid. With only 12 points, South admits that he is not too strong with his two diamond bid. The bidding then settles at a reasonable two spade contract.

West led the diamond king and continued with the ace and a small diamond. First bit of luck for declarer was that no one ruffed a diamond. Now declarer tested trump but three rounds showed that declarer had a trump loser.

He was in fact faced with one trump loser two diamonds already lost, one heart and at least one club.

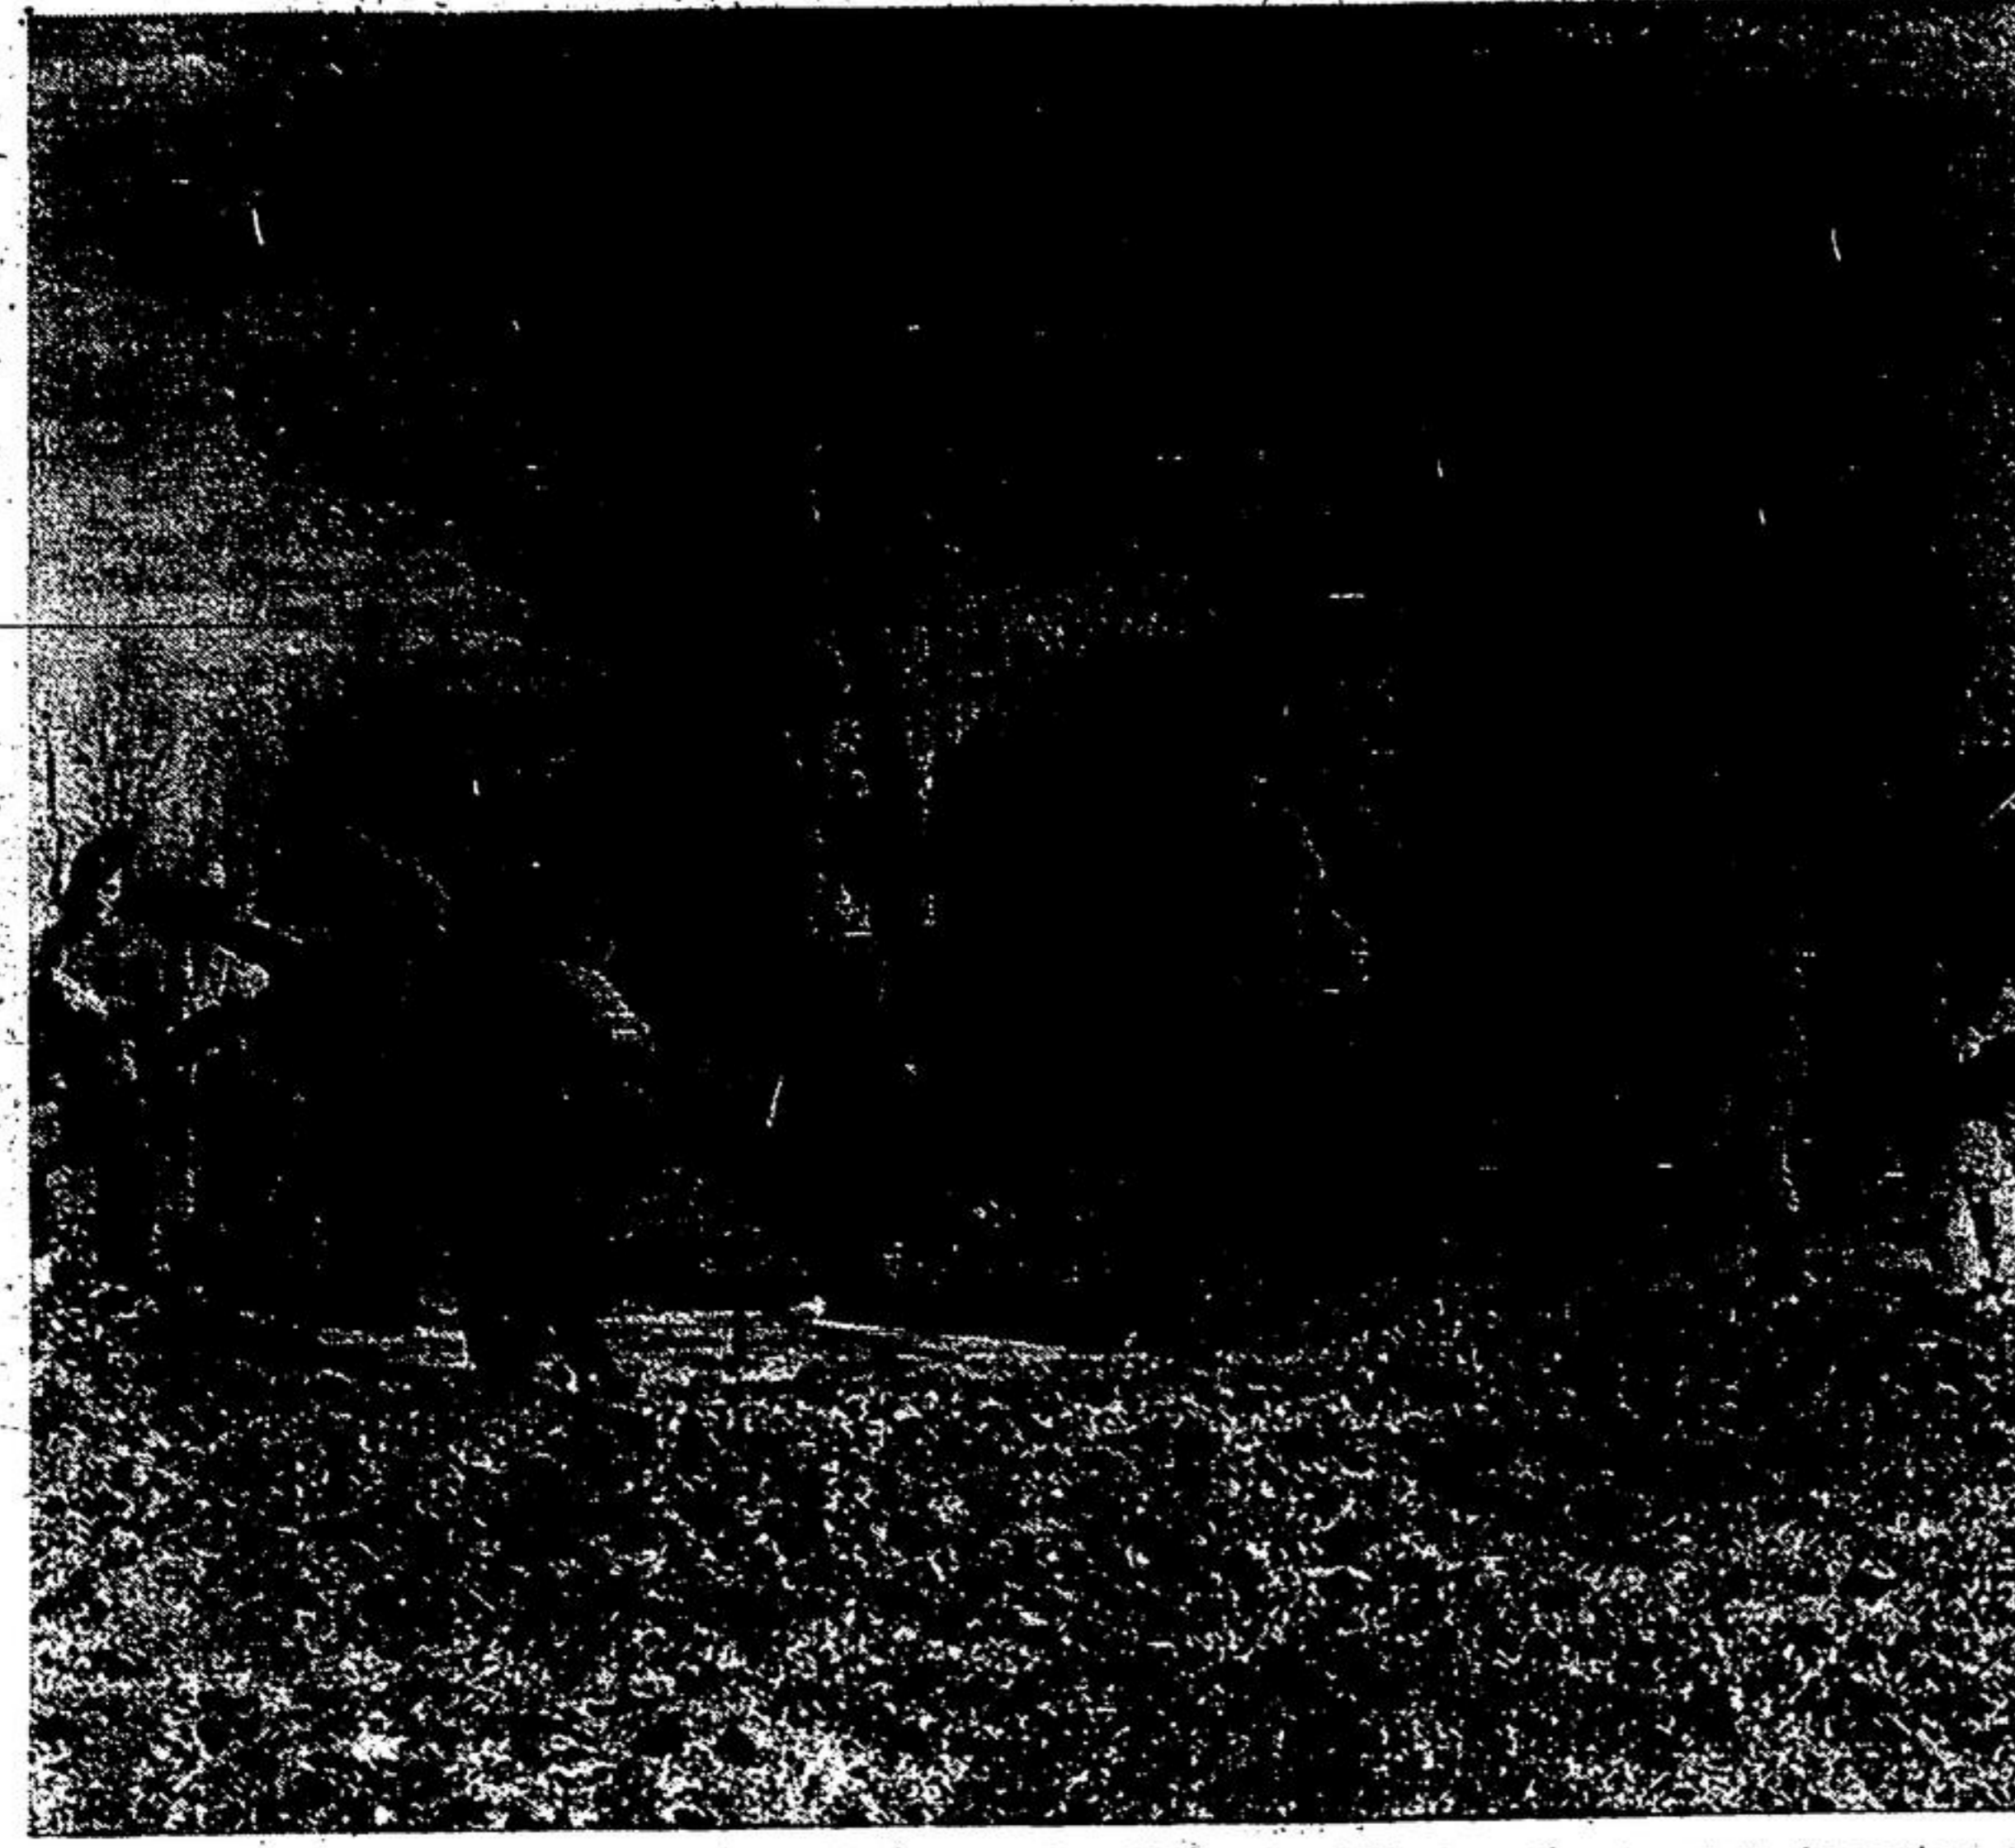

Declarer led a small heart and finessed the nine. East won with the ten and was end played. East has no trump left, nor any diamonds. The heart lead does not look attractive since declarer is leading hearts, so East led a club.

Declarer played the queen of clubs which won the trick.

The thirteenth diamond was led and West could see no reason to ruff, so he discarded a club. Now declarer took the club ace, the heart ace and ruffed a heart.

How could declarer make nine tricks with five losers on the hand? Simple for West's last card was a good trump and East's last card was a good club. Too bad they both took the same trick. Two spades making three was good for 9 match points out of twelve.

Thousand Walkers Last Year Oxfam Expecting Even More

Everybody who can walk can participate in Oxfam's fight against starvation and disease in the "Miles for Millions" walk May 3 — and the way local entries forms are being snatched up it appears everybody just might.

Last year, close to a thousand and people of all ages picked up entry forms at the Georgetown outlets, a figure which may be surpassed this time because the walk route includes Glen Williams as well as Norval and Georgetown which were on the route last year.

Walk officials said they expect more walkers from the Glen this year because the walkers will pass through there, and because a checkpoint will be set up there.

They also anticipate a greater number of walkers from Georgetown, Norval and Stewarston, locally, because of the impression made by the thousands who passed through these communities last time.

Last year's Oxfam walk, Saturday May 4, involved close to 4,000 walkers and raised almost $80,000. That route ran from Brampton, along the base line to Hornby, up the 7th line to Georgetown, and back to Brampton via Norval and Huttonville. It covered 35 miles.

This year the distance is about the same, but the route runs from St. Mary's Church in Brampton, out Queen St. W. to Huttonville, through Norval and Georgetown to Wildwood, east through Glen Williams, to Union Church, south to No. 17 Side road, across through Snelgrove, south on the 1st line East and Kennedy Road to Queen St. and back to the starting point.

The local walk is one of many which will be held on May 3 from B.C. to Newfoundland, all part of Oxfam's campaign to do something about the problems of the world's needy.

In 1968 at least 250,000 across the country walked for Oxfam and $3 million was raised.

For those still not familiar with how the walk raises money, every walker has at least one sponsor which whom they make their own agreements. The sponsor, for instance, may agree to pay the walker $1. for every mile walked, or, if the sponsor is backing several walkers, 10 cents or a quarter for every mile they complete. Sponsors may have as many walkers entered as they wish, and walkers may enlist any number of sponsors.

In past walks, some have bonuses to walkers for completing the route; challenges have been made by individuals and groups with the one dropping out first sponsoring the other; some sponsors have paid lump sums for every checkpoint reached, and in other cases sponsors have agreed to pay a fee for the first mile doubling the pledge each successive mile. The kinds of arrangements which may be made are endless.

As a last resort, the walker
