Dear Hilda

I received a phone call yesterday that really touched me and I'd like to share it with you.

One of our senior lady customers lost her purse at Loblaws—not once, but twice in recent weeks—and also left her walking stick behind—just once so far.

Each time the store manager located her lost items and returned them to her safely (including the contents of the purse). She has renewed faith in the honesty and integrity of people and is going to try to take better care of her belongings in future.

This might be a good opportunity to remind everyone that although people are basically honest, it is not a good idea to leave purses and other valuable articles unattended in shopping carts even for a moment. We all can't be as lucky as the lady who called me this week.
