Pay Fees to French School But Balk at Transportation

Halt County Board of Education Lawless pointed out to vote against the motion because of a matter of principle. The French language committee, chaired by Acton trustee Tom Watson, had earlier decided it would not be economically feasible to establish a French language school in Halt County at this stage.

"Separatism" Oakville Trustee Richard Goodin spoke out against the committee's recommendation to pay fees to the North York board, calling it a "move towards separatism."

"We keep talking about unity in this country," he said. "I don't like this move towards separatism."

Price also said he would have to vote against the motion because of a matter of principle. "Why does the provincial government always put boards of education in the hot seat?" he asked.

Education boards are required by law to pay the costs of students who have to go outside the board's area of jurisdiction to obtain education not provided by their own board.

Pease also complained that the French language education problem is "very much a creature of Premier Robarts and the provincial government," and said the government should assist education boards in bearing the costs of such an education.
