

Van Donkelaar-Schouten Wedding Ceremony at Christian Reformed

Now living at 67 William St. in Barrie, Mr. and Mrs. Aart van Donkelaar were married in the Christian Reformed Church in a 7 p.m. ceremony on October 10. Rev. A. J. VandenPol officiated at a double ring ceremony, in which the bride's father gave her in marriage.

The bride, Anna Margaretha Schouten, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aart Schouten, R. R. 2 Georgetown and was employed with the law firm of Dodokin and Sopinka. The groom, an employee of Moldex Ltd., Barrie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John van Donkelaar, Barrie.

George DeKleer was organist for the wedding ceremony and the church was decorated with white, gladioli and orange poms and candelabra.

For her marriage the bride chose a floor length, long sleeved gown of pearl de broche accented by scalloped swiss lace around the collar and train. A chapel veil was accented with swiss lace flowers and she wore a matching headpiece. She carried a bouquet of yellow throat orchid surrounded by white baby carnations, poms and bridal lace.

Her sister-in-law Mrs. Hendrica Schouten was matron of honour and Mrs. Alice Keen was senior bridesmaid. Their gowns, Mrs. Schouten in green and Mrs. Keen in gold, were long sleeved empire waisted of polyester crepe, with a slight train flowing from the gown's back seam. The bride's sisters, Jeannette and Diana Schouten were bridesmaids, also gowned in gold. Attendants wore orange poms in their hair and carried bouquets of orange poms with velvet ribbon streamers.

Bert Schouten was groomsmen; Vic Triemstra, Slayner and Andrew Dykstra, Midhurst were ushers.

At a reception at the Squire's Inn Brampton, the bride's mother wore a dress and coat ensemble of pale green, brown and beige accessories and a white gardenia corsage. Also receiving guests, the groom's mother was in turquoise and grey brocade, with turquoise and patent accessories and a white gardenia corsage.

For a honeymoon trip to Florida and Nassau, the bride wore a two piece gold suit, brown leather accessories and white gardenia and stephanotis corsage.

After Blood Donations This is What Happens

After a blood donation has been completed, the donor will often ask "What happens to my blood now?" The procedure and tests which are done on each and every unit do not vary from clinic to clinic or depot to depot, nor do they vary with the number of donations, i.e. blood from a '50 time' donor is treated in exactly the same manner as that of the 'first time donor'.

First of all, a specimen of blood is obtained from the completed pack of blood, this specimen is labelled in the same manner as the unit of blood. The many different tests which will be used to carry out will be done to obtain an intimate profile on the donor's blood.

The donor's unit of blood is refrigerated as soon as possible and should be kept under constant refrigeration from this time until it is transfused into a patient. The type of refrigeration will vary along the way, from the time the blood is being transported in the refrigerated truck back to the depot laboratory, stored in refrigerated rooms in the depot, delivered in refrigerated insulated boxes to the hospital, and finally in hospital blood bank refrigerators.

The reason for this vigilance is to ensure that the various elements of blood will remain in the best possible condition, so that when the blood is transfused, the patient receiving this unit will derive maximum benefit from the blood.

The day following the clinic, a team of especially trained technologists from the depot sets up a battery of tests on each sample of blood, a minimum of 10 separate tests are done each sample and all the results are checked by another technologist. These tests take approximately 4 to 5 hours and provide much valuable information about the donor's blood group and Rh factor.

In addition, information about other blood factors will be obtained also. When the laboratory staff is satisfied with the results of the tests, the units of blood are examined visually properly labelled and pronounced suitable to be issued to the hospitals.

After the blood has arrived at the hospital, units are selected on the basis of the blood group and Rh and tests are done between the blood of the patient and the blood of the unit; these tests are done to ensure a safe 'match' which will guarantee that the blood will give maximum benefit to the patient.

The fourth Georgetown donor clinic of the year will be held in the Holy Cross auditorium Monday
