

Kipling's Jungle Tales Portrayed for Parents

The jungle stories by Rudyard Kipling provided the theme of the 5th Georgetown B. Pack Cubes when they held their annual parents' night, Wednesday, in Holy Cross church.

About 25 parents attended the program to watch the Cubs portray the jungle stories in games, hear how the boys are inspected and points awarded and a general rundown on Scouting and how it works.

Three badge presentations were made at the night to Hal Porter, Michael Smyth, and Robert Rosset. They received the House Orderly, Musician and Handyman badges respectively. There were also a number of service badges presented to those Cubs with more than one year's service.

Cubs gave their grand hour which was in Kipling's stories, the wolves attack to Akela, at the start of the program. After their leader read a part of the jungle story the Cubs enacted it in game form.

They played six such games portraying when Sheer Cahn stepped in a fire while hunting and Red; his attempt to steal Mowgli from the wolves; Bala's tutoring of Mowgli; Kaa the python's instructions in respect for others; the discovery of the king's treasure house; and Mowgli realizing when it came time to leave the jungle.

Parents viewed slides of the year's activities, inspected their scrap books and were served tea, coffee and cookies by the Sixers.

More Space Than Children New Experience for Schools

Douglas Lawless, assistant director of education for Halton Board of Education, said Thursday the county's 12 secondary schools will have accommodation for 3,134 more students than are expected to enrol in September 1970.

Director of education, Jim Singleton, blamed the situation on local school boards starting building projects before the county board officially took over.

Lawless said the surplus space will not run out until 1974 and will trim next year's capital building budget.

He predicted the high school student population in the county will grow in four years by 4,312 students, 8.1 per cent of the general population growth.

He said it is extremely difficult to predict increases because of a changing birthrate.

"The baby boom of the early 1950's seems to be over" Lawless said. "And families are having fewer children."

Five Car Accident One of Several on Town Streets

Drivers and passengers escaped injury in a five vehicle accident on Guelph Street near Armstrong Avenue, Thursday, minutes before the noon hour.

Involved were cars driven by Burt Henderson of 7 Lane Ct., Sheila Smith of 12 Gower Rd., and pickup trucks driven by Don Houston of 24 Chapel St. E., Larry Majurey of Cheltenham, and Bob McDonald of 62 Rexway Drive.

Police said the Henderson car had stopped on the highway. The Smith car was slowing and attempting to pass when collided with from behind by the Houston truck. The Majurey truck stopped behind those three and was hit from behind by the McDonald truck.

There was no damage to the Henderson car, but damage to the rest totalled $675 according to investigating officer Constable Paul Robertson.

FOUR SAME DAY

There were three other auto accidents in Georgetown streets the same day, two of them involving injury.

Judith Hayes of R.R. 1, Georgetown was treated for a cut mouth at Georgetown hospital and released following an accident on Ontario Street, west of the north end of Main at 3:45 p.m.

Barbara Lavoie, also of RR 1, was westbound on the street when she lost control of the car. It crossed the centre line striking the eastbound Hayes car and continued on into the south ditch.

Constable Ken Firth placed property damage at $750.
