Puts U.K. Man
In Touch with Families He Knew

A resident of the U.K. who 10 years ago emigrated with the YMCA for a temporary stay at a hostel near Norval has been put back in touch with some old acquaintances by Mayor Wheeler. Emmerson, John Hill of Plymouth, England, wrote to the mayor's office recently asking the whereabouts of a couple of local families with whom he had lost touch.

"The head of the hostel was a Mr. McLaren," wrote Mr. Hill. "His colleagues were a Mr. Page and Mr. McCloughlan. I made friends with an English family who were called Parton."

"There was Mr. and Mrs. and to daughters and a son. Their names were Nellie, Vera and Alan. Their house was on Adelaide Street. Have you any idea, please if they are still there or where they may be?"

The writer also enquired about "a family called Morrow." "I would so much love to get in touch with any of these people if I can," he said.

In his reply, Mayor Emmerson brought Mr. Hill up to date on the whereabouts of local people whose names he had mentioned, and also forwarded a copy of the Georgetown directory including a map showing how the town has extended right up to the YMCA camp near Norval. When Mr. Hill was there, the town's population was about 3,000 and the YMCA camp was almost three miles from the eastern limits.

Mr. Hill's address and copies of his letter are forwarded to acquaintances here.
