Road Watch Program helps police get aggressive drivers off the road

Have you ever witnessed someone driving aggressively and wished you could do something about it?

Local residents can do their part by reporting what they see on local streets through the Community Road Watch Program.

"This is an excellent program that the police operate with the aid of Halton residents," said Regional Chair Gary Carr. "The program empowers residents to make the Halton community a safer one."

Anyone who witnesses a vehicle being operated in an unsafe manner can submit a citizen report form to Halton Regional Police.

The forms can be found at www.hrps.on.ca. Completed forms can be dropped off in one of the secure drop boxes located throughout the community at participating police stations, business and libraries or faxed to police at 905-845-0381.

"Road Watch is one of the innovative programs that partner concerned citizens and the Halton Regional Police Service to ensure community safety," said Police Chief Gary Crowell. "Traffic safety is of paramount importance and we will continue to work with the community to keep Halton a safe and wonderful place to live and work."

Once a completed form has been submitted the police will send a letter to the registered owner of the vehicle that was observed. If a second complaint is made against the same vehicle police will send another letter and may follow up with a phone call or visit.

A third report against a vehicle will result in a third letter and personal visit to the vehicle's owner by a local police officer.

"I encourage every Halton resident to participate in the program and join Halton Region and the Halton Regional Police Service in keeping Halton one of Canada's safest communities," said Carr.

For more information on the Community Watch Program contact the police at 905-878-5511 or visit the aforementioned website.
