

Trudeau charms — opens United Breeders

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau made a big hit with thousands who gathered in Guelph, Friday and Saturday. Officials estimated 5,000 people were on hand Friday when the prime minister stepped on the CN station platform in Guelph after a train ride from Ottawa. It was the most tumultuous greeting ever accorded a politician in the Royal City, which is noted for its lukewarm reception of most dignitaries.

Many from this area were in the audience at the station or along the route of the motorcade which toured the main business section of Guelph. The prime minister made no official speeches during his visit but he did field questions at Guelph's youth hostel. Saturday, after a whirlwind including the Free Press reporter Denis Gibbons were on hand Saturday morning to watch the prime minister cut a ribbon held by Ontario's 1969 Dairy Princess Lorene Archdekin and Cheryl Manary, Miss Angouette of 1969, officially opening the building.

After arriving by helicopter from Walkerton, the prime minister and his official party toured the new quarters. Dr. C. R. Reeds, general manager of United Breeders Inc., served as guide.

Mr. Trudeau completed the tour of the building, the largest artificial insemination unit in Canada, then proceeded outside to a temporary stage for the official opening ceremony.

Congratulating United Breeders for its achievements, the prime minister pointed to the building as an example of how men have applied new techniques to improve breeding.

Following the ceremony, Mr. Trudeau met several of the dairy princesses from counties represented by United Breeders. The unit has a membership of about 20,000 farmers, serves 15 counties and breeds about 200,000 cows each year.

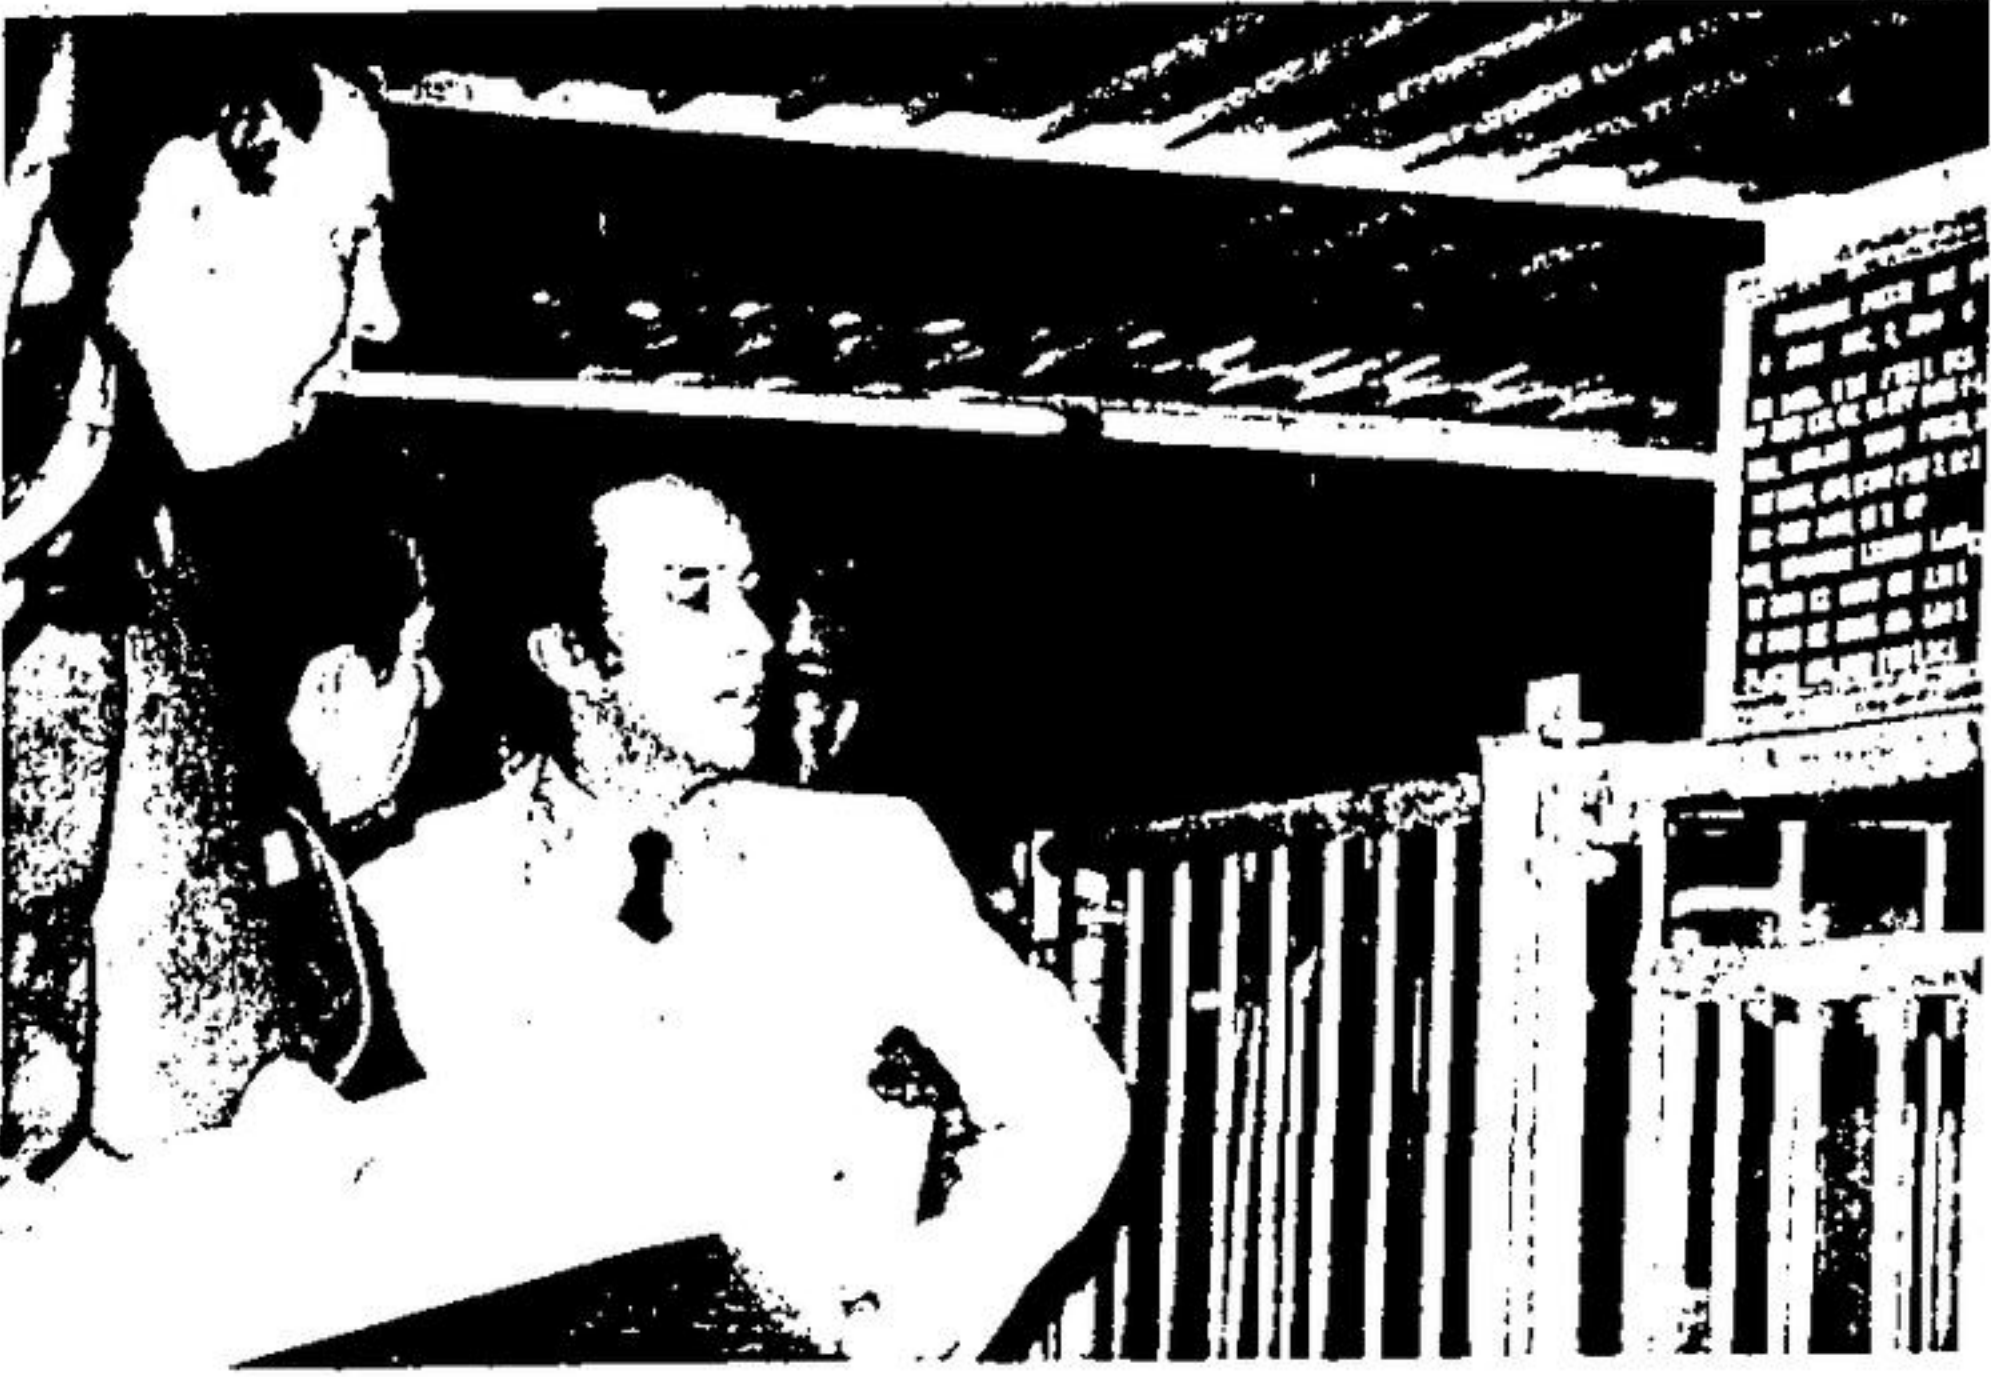

The new building covers about an acre of the 128 acre farm.

The prime minister's departure was delayed following the ceremony by hundreds of spectators seeking handshakes and autographs.

Jack Gilchrist, chairman of United Breeders' board of directors was unable to officiate during the ceremonies on account of injuries he suffered in a traffic accident the previous day.

The Elmira District Secondary School band played for the opening ceremony.

The prime minister was also made the first honorary member of United Breeders Inc.
