Two students marry bride wears midi

Bronwen Clenys Jones and John Phillip Morgan were married on August 27 in the Chapel of the Divinity College, McMaster University, Hamilton. Dr. M. Hillmer officiated for the six o'clock service and Miss A. White played the organ.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Clenys Jones, who moved from Burlington to R.R. 1, Campbellville, four months ago. Mrs. Jones teaches in Burlington and Mr. Jones has retired.

They have lived in various parts of the world. Mr. Jones was born in Wales, his wife in England, the bride in New Zealand and her sister, her bridesmaid, in Australia.

The groom is the son of Mrs. A. Morgan, Prince Rupert, B.C. and the late Mr. Morgan.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of Glendon College, York University. After their honeymoon they went to London, Ontario, where the groom is studying at Althouse College, and the bride at London Teachers' College.

Both the bride and her sister wore the new midi-length gowns for the ceremony. The bride wore a pale pink embroidered dress with pale pink shoes and carried sweetheart roses.

Her sister Sara Clenys Jones, Toronto, wore champagne silk with dark red shoes and carried dark red sweetheart roses. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and Norman Webster of Windsor was groomsmen.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, with guests from as far as England, Prince Rupert, Windsor and London included. A special guest was Miss Gwyneth Clenys Jones from Chester, England, the bride's aunt.

NEWCOMERS to this area, Mr. and Mrs. David Clenys Jones and two daughters have lived in many parts of the world, and are delighted with the Acton district. Daughter Bronwen, the bride, was born in New Zealand, her sister Sara, the bridesmaid, in Australia, their mother in England and their father in Wales.

Mince-meat time for group soon

The Daughters of Knox held their September meeting in the Miss Ellen Anderson room on Monday night with 13 members and one visitor present.

The president Mrs. Bern Van Fleet opened the meeting with a reading followed by the singing of Living For Jesus and the repeating of the motto in unison. Committees were named for the fall projects of making mince-meat and taking orders for church calendars.

Mrs. Brian Moore and her group opened the devotional service with the hymn Lord Speak to Me that I May Speak. The scripture was read responsively. The chapter from Interfaith Imperialism Toward Understanding in the study book was read and discussed. The hymn, At the Name of Jesus and prayer by Mrs. Brian Moore closed the meeting. All repeated the Mizpah Benediction. Fruit bread and cheese was served with tea.

Say CAS facilities adequate for needs

A Grand Jury's report noted administrative facilities of Halton Children's Aid Society in Milton are adequate for present needs.

The report complimented the residential treatment centre on Pallatin Drive in Oakville and jurors were greatly impressed by the home-like atmosphere and encouraged more of the same sort of buildings.

Modern O.S.O.D. The jury also visited Halton County Jail and Ontario School for the Deaf. About OSD the report said it was a modern up-to-date institution and added there were no deficiencies to be noted.

The report criticized the jail for the lack of activity for inmates, noting reading material was limited and there seemed to be little opportunity to make productive use of time available.

All frozen dairy-products—butter, milk, cheese and cream—are best thawed slowly in the refrigerator.

Adequate housing for Sheridan students

Housing in the Brampton area is quite adequate for Sheridan students, except for the fact that many accommodations are not within walking distances of the college, according to Dan O'Toole, housing co-ordinator. To date, there are 104 people willing to provide 185 places for students to live in the Streetville, Malton, Brampton and Mississauga area.

"Approximately 35 per cent of the students have access to cars, but transportation to the college campus seems to be our biggest problem", Dan said.

The housing registry office was set up at the college August 15 and will operate full time until September 18 after which time it will remain open on a less active basis.

The number to call for housing information is 451-1063.

And Gord calls me "Bumble!" I admit I do make the odd mistake or misjudgment now and then, like having my hand slip while pulling the bedcovers up around my neck and hitting myself in the nose. Or having my toothbrush slip and splashing my lip. But at least I don't break bones. I leave that to Gord.

The first time, it WAS my fault, I guess. Ten years ago, I was making a rock garden and thought the stone we used as a doorstep would fit in quite nicely. I forgot to mention anything about its removal to Gord, though, and the next morning he stepped out the front door and broke an ankle or something. I've never lived that down.

Crooked sneeze
The second time, I think Gord sneezed crookedly and cracked a rib. Now if THAT isn't bumbly, I don't know what is!

Last week, I heard blue noises coming from down by the pasture and looked out the door to see Gord hobbling up the path. He'd been taking a trailer thing off the back of the tractor; it had stuck, he'd clonked it, the tongue flew up and came down on his toes, breaking one.

Now the household is treading lightly, making wide circles around the injured member for fear of jiggling it and starting another uproar.

I really feel, though, that if Gord would try to lessen the damages and put a little more imagination into his accidents, he might make a first class bumbler.

It takes a lot of know-how (or is it "don't-know-how") to be walking along a smooth clear path, and turn your ankle hard enough to sprain it. Most important is the fact not only that it looks impossible to someone else, but also that it takes the doer quite by surprise, too.

Bumble Flair

The bumble with the most flair that I've ever done was with my new pressure cooker. I was boiling spaghetti and didn't realize that the lid was on tight enough to build up pressure. So when I lifted the lid, I got six servings of unbattered pasta smack in the ribs!

The best remedy I've found for all kinds of burns is to smear them with plain white soap and sprinkle with salt, and leave for four or five minutes before washing off. It hurts for a little while, but the whole thing goes away quite quickly. Anyhow, I grabbed the soap, smeared the burn, and then started laughing at the picture we must have made — me leaning over backwards and one of my dinner guests busy with the salt shaker. Indistinctly salting my midriff!

There's a lot of know-how, too, in timing things just right so that you pause directly under a fly-sticker, two seconds before it falls down. I've had that happen twice — both times just after I'd washed my hair.

And that brings me to the time I almost drowned in the bathroom sink while rinsing my hair, but that's another story.

The nicest recipe I've tried lately is a Tomato and Mushroom Pie. Sounds awful but tastes great if you like that kind of thing.

TOMATO & MUSHROOM PIE
Mix 1 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, 1 tsp. basil, ¼ tsp. sugar. Line a 9 inch pie plate with unbaked pastry. Sprinkle bottom with 2 tbsp. parmesan cheese and 3 chopped green onions. Slice 2 tomatoes to ¼ inch slices, and arrange a single layer. Fill in gaps with tomato pieces. Sprinkle with half the salt mixture, then 2 more tbsp. parmesan cheese, and 3 more chopped green onions. Saute 2 cups (or more) of mushrooms till lightly browned. Sprinkle over onions, with rest of salt mix.

Beat 2 eggs with 4 tbsp. flour and 1 cup cream. Pour over mushrooms and sprinkle with a bit more parmesan. Bake at 400 degrees for 35 to 45 minutes or until filling is set. Let cool 30 to 35 minutes before serving. May be reheated at 350 degrees.
