Esquesing council polishes off numerous deputations Monday premium, Esquesing Council spent most of Monday's regular meeting dealing with delegations of ratepayers who spilled out into the lobby of the council chambers at times.

First visitor in front of council was Andrew Varga who asked permission to move his shoe repair business into his house at R.R. 1, Georgetown, near the Cedar Springs motel, Mr. Varga told council he had a shop in Acton now but would find it more convenient if he could operate from his home. Council turned the request down, however, stating they would have to pass an amendment to the holding bylaw to allow a business in his home. Mr. Varga sald the business would be quiet and not bother anyone but the reeve declared they could do nothing at this time to help him.

Council decided to ask the building inspector to visit property at the 10th Line and Steeles Avenue to Investigate alleged contravention of building by-laws following complaints from a ratepayer who appeared to state the owner of the property was running a business of salvaging and repairing trucks out of a garage. The ratepayer sald he had first asked the Assessment Board to reduce his taxes but he was advised to approach council with his complaints first. Clerk Del French looked up the building permit for the property and found it was for erection of a garage.

After a cheek-by-jowl confrontation with road superintendent Bud Snow in front of amused spectators, an aroused Mrs. R. J. Larner of R.R. 1 Norval, extracted a promise that the township would dig the ditch out in front of her residence at the Ninth Line and Steeles Avenue. Mrs. Larner told council she had asked for a ditch to take water away for nine years-and was still waiting.

"I was told there was no money in the budget," she said, "and I'd like to know when there's going to be money in the budget for it. I'm fed up." She said she and her husband dug the ditch out by hand but admitted to the road superintendent they had also filled it in at one time.

Mr. Snow told Mrs. Larner the township had raised the road there and filled in the ditches but workmen were heading that way and would probably be there this week. Deputy Reeve Tom Hill agreed that bad weather had delayed road work and the road superintendent could not be everywhere.

Council also instructed the building inspector to investigate alleged contravention of the bylaws by a TV sales and repair business north of Milton on Highway 25, following complaints from neighbors Percy Hicks and William Serafini. Mr. Hicks furnished a copy of the Milton paper which included an advertisement for a business operating from the premises. The building permit allowed only alterations to a garage for storage and utility, the clerk affirmed.

After considerable discussion, council passed a resolution which would compel the proprietor to stop operating from the premises if he was doing it illegally.

Council gave permission to Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull to open an antique shop in Norval in a house described as the "Lindner" home. The deputy-reeve told

Mrs. Turnbull who appeared in front of council that the business would be operating in a village so The Acton Free Press, Wednesday, November 18, 1970 Second Class Mail Registration Number - 0515
