Motorhome Provides Real Living Space

Self-Contained Unit Adds Luxury Of Indoors to Great Outdoors

The new facility is the modern motorhome — not to be confused with the mobile home, for the former has mobility far in excess of the latter.

The motorhome, brought to its ultimate refinement on behalf of vacationers

Swing Off Road

It's so rugged, you can swing it off the road wherever parking is permitted. No worry about the availability of utilities, for everything necessary to normal comfort in one's own home, even to the point where you figuratively "put the cat out" and lock up securely for the night, is built in.

Yes, that includes meal-making equipment, lighting for leisurely living-room-like reading, watching what's on the air, sleeping as confidently relaxed as one does at home, plus lavatory facilities, all operable without the customary hook-ups required for other types of personalized vacation-time travel.

Under Own Power

But none of this is at the expense of the mobility of this immensely modern vehicle. It moves along the roads under its own power, allowing vacationers to ride high above normal traffic and thus have a clearer view of the passing panorama.

Quiet back country roads lure motorhome travelers who carry luxury living right along with them. "Shumpiking" opens new vistas for fun-minded families by allowing them to explore out of the way spots as they head for a relaxing time at the seashore, mountains or lakes.

Outdoorman Jim Dee, left, and partner are new breed of hunter. They operate from mobile base camp — a commodious motorhome.

Many prefer instead the queen size bed with headboard storage built in over the driver's compartment, which does away with the inconvenience of making up a bed before retiring.

Businesses are finding in the motor home the ideal way to display their merchandise in perfectly controlled surroundings in a mobile showroom built to their own design and specifications.
