Ballots lost

The Ontario Conservative party suffered harassment earlier this year when computers used to calculate votes at the leadership convention went on the fritz and ballots had to be counted by hand. But they have nothing over the Halton Division of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

June 30, the last official day of school saw teachers in secondary schools across the county casting ballots for or against the most recent contract offer by the Halton Board of Education. Because it was the last day of school teachers voted in their own schools and the ballots were to be mailed to Halton president Tom Ramautarsingh at Georgetown.

Misplaced
Somehow some of the ballots were placed in the mailbags the board uses for their internal mail, which are sent from the board to schools and from school to school.

When the ballots didn't reach the president who was waiting anxiously to learn and announce the outcome of the vote, he began phoning involved people all over the county. Finally after a host of phone calls the bewildered president learned the ballots had been taken to the board headquarters and then to the west education centre in Burlington. It wasn't until five days after the ballots were cast that the announcement was finally made.

Turn down Acton grant

Acton Recreation Committee was informed by letter they were turned down for any grants to run a summer program under the Opportunities for Youth program, operated by the Hon. Gerard Pelletier.

The letter did not expound on the reasons for turning the Acton, request down but praised the quality of the program which has run into some heavy criticism across the country.
