Home ec teacher talks to Institute

The Greenock Women's Institute held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. Gordon Leslie. Mrs. A. Gates, the president opened the meeting by reading a poem, Stay with us Autumn. After opening ode and Mary Stewart Collect, the roll call, "Bring something new I have found in the supermarket", proved that there are always new products to be found.

Mrs. R. Sinclair gave the meditation, and in honor of Remembrance day November 11, read a couple of poems, one being in Flanders Fields.

Mrs. R. Sinclair in charge of the program had as a topic, "Consumer Affairs". The guest speaker Miss Lydia Snow, sister of the president, was introduced by Mrs. Sinclair.

Home Ec teacher
Miss Snow gave an interesting talk on Home Economics. She is a teacher of Home Economics at Tecumseh public school in Burlington for grades 6 and 7 and 8. With 600 pupils, many coming from surrounding schools, she found it difficult to give individual attention, but now with the new semester system she has only half the pupils and more time to spend with them.

Miss Snow also showed slides of a tour she made of England, Italy, Switzerland, France, and Belgium last summer. Everyone enjoyed her talk and slides.

The speaker was thanked and presented with a gift.

Lunch was served by Mrs. J. McCulloch and Mrs. H. Gates, the committee in charge. A short business meeting was conducted. The courtesy convener Mrs. A. Winter thanked the hostess, the program convener and the lunch committee.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. C. Aitken.

the painted box

By Wendy Thomson

Having just got over a small bout with the flu, and while everything is still fresh in my mind, I thought I'd jot down a few "do's and don'ts" for the next time I'm laid low, or for anybody else it might help.

First, if you feel a bug coming on, don't try to rush around and get all the housework done just so you can rest easy. You'll only have to do it all over (and then some) as soon as you feel better. Might as well go to bed early.

Don't get sick on a weekend. Exhausted sleep will be punctuated with shrill cries of "Leave me alone! (Give me that, Let go! etc.) or I'll tell Mom!"

Also, on weekends, necessary trips to the bathroom involve long unnecessary conversations. "who's in there?" "Me." "Hurry up!" "I am." "Faster." "I can't."

Call father
Do discourage children from being ill at the same time. Or teach them to call for their father when necessary, or inform him of the results if too late. Disaster areas must not be hidden under reams of paper towelling or newspaper and left till mother is up again.

Do instruct father that sick children should not be put in upper bunk.

Do buy basins for sick room use. It takes time to empty the contents of a waste-paper basket. Second patient might feel that a pail from the barn doesn't have the right - aura?

Bouncing bed
Do instruct husband on possible hazards of climbing into double bed as though it were a trampoline.

Do leave a list of food available and stock large quantities of canned and or frozen foods. Saves on bedroom consultations on whether the corned beef or the salami would be best for supper.

Don't rush the getting-up process. First, someone (especially on weekends) will catch you in some less than fashionable attire, such as knee-socks, grandmother's pyjamas, husband's dressing gown and slippers, corpse's pallor, and zombie hair-do.

As bad as this outfit looks, though, don't hurry to change. Dressing seems to be a statement of well-being and someone is bound to say (notwithstanding the fact that you're hanging onto the furniture as you wobble around) "Feeling better? Well, how about running down to the barn and letting the cows out. I'm feeling a little queasy and I think I'll take a nap."

One thing I like, when I'm not feeling so hot, or when I'm trying to cut down on calories, is the following. Takes about 5 minutes to make.

EGG DROP SOUP
Into one cup of boiling water, add (in this order), 1 chicken

Afternoon W.M.S. recalls Flanders

The November meeting of the Afternoon Auxiliary of Knox Church W.M.S. was held on Remembrance Day at the home of Mrs. H. Malnzprze, John Street.

After the president had read the poem, "Was it a Dream?" the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes was read by Mrs. Elsie Miller, followed by prayer.

The theme of the meeting centred around the immortal poem, "In Flanders Fields," and after a sketch of the life of the author, Colonel John McCrae, Mrs. Miller read a fine account of a visit to these fields written by the late Mrs. Arthur Cherry, a former editor of the mission magazine, "The Glad Tidings."

Miss Bella Mae Ruszell sang "Trees", written by the late Joyce Kilmer, a young war hero.

Moment's silence
The usual moment of silence was observed, broken by the stanza, We are the dead. Short days ago We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow, Loved and were loved, and now we lie in Flanders Fields.

The roll call was answered by something which had its origin in the wars.

Voice of world
The president pointed out many ways in which, instead of taking the Gospel of the church out into the world, we have listened to the voice of the world and allowed its vanities to creep into the church, thus breaking faith with those who lie in Flanders Fields.

In addition to contributing the usual amount of money to be sent to W.M.S. headquarters, the sum of $75 was voted to be sent to Guyana to bring a little Christmas cheer to the needy there.

The meeting was concluded with the customary cup of tea.

Enjoy Moliere

By Robert Ellerby

Thursday, Nov. 25, an indeterminate number of present and future ADHS French students, under the leadership of M. Gayer, made the grueling journey from Acton to the University of Guelph, War Memorial Hall. Why did we come here? It was our duty to come and see "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, Moliere's greatest work.

Who was Moliere? He was a playwright in 17th-century France, who was exclusively patronized by Louis XIV, the "Sun King". An interesting side-effect of this patronage is that ballet or other dance scenes were placed in all of Moliere's plays to please the Royal Court. However, he died, without ever being buried in holy ground, because French society looked down upon everybody who was involved in the theatre (it apparently was not the place to be in those days).

Although the play itself was completely in French, with 90 per cent of the words being unintelligible, the plot came across loud and clear, thanks to the 10 per cent we did know and what happened on the stage itself. It can also be assured to all of you that everybody who was there—and there was not a single empty seat in the place—enjoyed this work of Moliere extremely.

BIG crowds have been enjoying public skating.

THERE were no reportable accidents in town this week.

ANOTHER broken window this week—this time at the Robert Little School.

GOOD weather for filling in these trip to Nassau entry forms.

TOWN was quiet Sunday afternoon. Everyone was watching the Grey Cup game.

DROP-IN coffee hour at the parish hall tomorrow (Thursday) the days have been changed from Wednesdays to Thursdays.

THE C.G.I.T. girls are beginning to practise for their candlelight service.

Missed from the visitors listed in the report of the silver anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Masales in last week's issue were Mr. and Mrs. Ray Everdell, Port Hope, and Peter Higgs of Cooksville, who also visited in town and helped the popular couple celebrate at Acton Meadows on the Saturday night.

Paul Cooper and Michael Marcoux have returned after several months' journey which took them out west, down to California, over to Florida and the Bahamas, up the east coast and home again. They travelled various ways, from plane to hitch-hiking, working when they could. They were impressed by British Columbia and Arizona particularly.
