MONDAY was a big night for thirty little Rockwood girls who arrived at the fall season opening night for Junior Auxiliary members at St. John's Parish Hall. With meetings held every Monday the non-denominational group enjoyed games and songs while four teeny-weenies attended for their first time. # Ratepayers name slate financial picture bleak

Three directors were turned to office on the Rockwood and Area Residents and Ratepayer's Association Board last Thursday evening and an enthusiastic assemblage at the St. John's Parish Hall, also saw two newcomers elected to the executive.

John Clark and Don Gordon, both of R.R. 5 Rockwood, and Arthur Harris of Rockwood, were re-elected for another three year term while, serving for one-year terms, will be electees Bert Baum and Tony Reid.

Approximately 50 members attending the meeting heard Association President Bob Leslie, give a run down on the two OMB decisions before he turned the meeting over to Rockwood lawyer Bob Murray, who is presently handling the Association's appeal to the provincial cabinet.

Uphill fight

Explaining the legal aspects of the appeal which he expects to go before the cabinet within the next few weeks, Mr. Murray referred to people power and said that politicians, weighing the appeal, have a tendency to listen to it. "For this reason," said the Association's spokesman, "we are circulating a petition which we hope will draw enough support to help the appeal". Mr. Murray further commented that it would be an uphill fight.

Memberships were also part of the evening's business and John Clark gave a bleak picture of the Association's financial standing. "However, said the optimistic treasurer, "projects and memberships will greatly assist in restoring black figures to the ledger book. Mr. Clark had pointed out that the Association's financial state shows it to be almost $1,000 in the red as a result of the five day hold-over of Ontario Municipal Board meeting held in the village.

News and views

By LORRAINE

Flack back, shows a mixture of favor and resentment at last week's plea for teenage requisites and, for every parental commendation of the suggested needs of the community there were those who felt that there is already sufficient village hall and hockey participation to keep the kids happy all year round.

Great, isn't it? Area residents a few years ago knocked themselves out to accrue community financing to make ball games in the village a reality for district youngsters. They collected, tithed, and found ways of raising money to get the Eramosa Recreation Committee project off the ground so that young athletes would have an opportunity to play ball with top notch facilities.

Well, this is fine for the kids who like softball. In the winter some parents can transport their sports oriented off-spring to Guelph or Acton to attend weekly league hockey sessions or ice skating instruction schools.

No transport
There is, of course, an area of question here plus a story of geography with financial history up for grabs. Too often a kid who could be a star in a small town never gets to ever play because his parents haven't the means to get him to where it's at. In Rockwood there is no organized car pool for couples with young possibilities who have no transportation other than the family car which is away somewhere else but in the village.

How are youngsters supposed to take part in any program of hockey or figure skating activities and how can parents whose kids do have such opportunities feel smug because they've managed to keep their own children busy but to heck with the other kids whose parents can't or didn't.

Again, what about those others possessing all the ability, plus the energy, with the additional zest of knowing the importance of "working to get"? What about the parents who know what they'd like to do for their youngsters but are handicapped due to distance or lack of hometown facilities?

Just as important
Then of course, who's to say that all youngsters are athletically oriented anyway and who's to say that music, books, and drawing, are not just as important as outdoor activity to the child not sports inclined? If one group of adults is committed to building diamonds for those who like softball what so big about music or art centres for those who enjoy the aesthetics of life?
