Variety of experiences for school trippers

By Janice Gibson
Terrific, just one of many words that could describe the field trip to Toronto last Wednesday. A group of students from the Mass Media and Marketing classes were accompanied by their teachers Boris Shean and Joan Morgan.

Mr. Shean and his remaining students headed for the Colonnade, Lohian Mews, and Yorkville, downtown Toronto, on floor, west of Yonge. Here were the new type of stores. The Colonnade was a modern complex consisting of apartments with the shopping centre directly below.

literally, a market with outdoor shops where you can buy just about anything you want. Here the students were to try three different foods they had never tasted before. These ranged from sugar cane to Hungarian sausage.

NOTES FROM ACTON HIGH

By Janice Gibson
November 22 was a great day for a group of students from the high school. They took the whole day and went on a field trip to Toronto. The object was to view different aspects of marketing and mass media.

46 students, 12 adults off to Spain in March

During the spring vacation this year about 46 students and 12 adults from ADHS will take a Ship's School tour in Spain and either Granada or Morocco. Tour

A few more students are hoping to go if accommodation can be arranged.

Walled city
The fifth day takes the students to the walled city of Segovia and the Alcazar castle, the Palace of La Garna with its superb fountains and gardens, and the El Escorial Palace.

Shoppers answer students' questions

Lee and I were posted at Honest Ed's. We were to ask people different questions about how often they shopped there, why they shopped there, what they usually bought, and what they thought of the quality of the products.

Mall is busy class discovers

On Wednesday November 22, the Marketing 400 class went on a field trip. We visited many different types of stores and on the way home stopped at Sherway Gardens.

Mall busy
Their general opinions are as follows: they all agreed that the mall was extremely busy and believed that their customers liked quality, selection and comfort all under one roof.

found under one roof, and the reputation of one of its stores. Out of the six people we talked to only one person preferred street to mall shopping.

Enjoy atmosphere of Colonnade

I'm on my soapbox this week editorializing about changes in horse breeds wrought by North America. What has happened to the native horses with their very individual characteristics so suited to their purposes? It seems that everywhere you look you see imitation Saddlebreds or Thoroughbreds, no matter what the original breed.

whip and a wee pony on the end of a chain, "taming" the beast, is really laughable. Where is our affectionate children's friend capable of carrying 200 lbs. if necessary?

A Personal Statement to the Voters of Acton. Text: 'On Dec. 4, when you cast your ballot for Town Council, I believe it should be with the full understanding of what position respective candidates for office take on important issues. For your consideration, I would like to make the following observations: -With Regional Government for Halton County promised shortly, I believe it is crucial to have responsible and concerned representatives at the local level to prepare for the inauguration of this new concept in municipal government. -The incoming Council should adopt a policy of restraint towards further residential development in Acton until the effects of the current boom in housing on town services have been evaluated. -Although the Town has recently sold the remaining land in the industrial park, I believe that Council still has a strong responsibility to encourage new industry to locate in Acton. -Acton's Centennial is rapidly approaching, and members of Council should be prepared to contribute time and effort to ensure that this milestone in our local history is a resounding success. However, Council must also be mindful of the financial aspects surrounding Centennial celebrations, and attitudes of local citizens must be carefully considered. -A Councillor should provide an avenue of communication between local government and the individual taxpayer. All citizens deserve a fair appraisal of their concerns. -It's time we started demonstrating a positive pride in our community! I would like the privilege of representing you again on Council.
