The painted box

By Wendy Thomson

Christmas will be over by the time this is in the paper, but as I'm writing, it's the 21st and the rush is on. This year, though, I'm not doing too badly. Maybe starting my cards in August helped some. I've done virtually no baking so far and intend on doing little more.

Much to my delight, we're invited out for both Christmas and New Year's so I won't have to fuss over them (even though I DO enjoy the fussing.) And the one evening we're having people in, my sweet husband agreed that having it catered might not be a bad idea, if it's reasonable enough (it is!)

So out of all the usual holiday chores, that leaves just the presents to think about. The three youngsters (I wonder how long I can get away with calling them that?) agreed that if we got a television set, they wouldn't expect much else. Done! — one TV and a small pile of books.

Drips and Drabs
When it came time for me to shop for Gord, the cheque I'd been saving to spend on him had been spent on one emergency or another (we average about two a week). Instead of a big splash, I just bought dribs and drabs and tried to make them LOOK interesting, if nothing else. That's why Gord'll find five hankies and two styptic pencils rolled up and made into seven links of "sausage". And one tea mug with 10 individually gift-wrapped tea bags inside.

Today I might splurge a bit if I can find and buy a new tractor seat cushion for him, so he'll stop taking the bath mat to sit on. It isn't that he gets it dirty, but a couple of times it froze to the seat and in pulling it loose, Gord left half the fringe behind.

I intended crocheting a little something for everyone in the family, but all that got finished was a shawl for my mother. I chained a row to the proper width, but by the time I'd done 8 or 10 rows, it had stretched about 10 inches.

Absolutely undaunted, and not wanting to see my mother with a shawl flapping around her knees, I set to work, turned the ends up, and there it was — a "Shawl with Pockets".

One thing I thought I'd like, was a clock radio but had second thoughts on Sunday when I switched mine on at 7.30 in the morning to be blasted by "Just buy Kentucky Fried Chicken in your neighbourhood..." ICK — at 7.30 a.m.?! And shortly after that came another ad — "When your wife tells you what she wants for Christmas, write it down, forget it, and give her a fur coat..." Isn't that just like a man? All she wants is a green toilet seat and he gives her a FUR COAT! No green seat I know my green toilet seat won't be under the tree again this year, but I don't mind because Gord is installing a doozy of a present right now.

Five years ago, we read about "Central Cleaning Units" and thought they were just THE thing. It's a vacuum cleaner, but the motor is mounted in two or three wall valves in different parts of the house that you just plug a hose into and away you go! It was one of those "someday..." things that I wasn't holding my breath over, but I guess Gord felt that lately, me and my broom weren't up to par (we weren't). He suggested I write the Vacuum-Maid people in Toronto, I did and within a few days was sitting with a big smile and a lap full of vacuum hose.

Talk about the kids with a new toy! This is going to be a BIG thing around here, I can tell. I'm going to have to FIGHT to use it (for a while, anyhow.) And I don't feel like fighting. I fell down the cellar stairs yesterday, traversing the bottom half on my own bottom half. The finishing touch was crawling back up (trying all the way to decide whether to die down there or in bed) to find an invitation in the mail for another jaunt through Esqueusing Township by horse.

The "lunch and refreshments" afterwards I might make, but the ride I think I'll pass up.

Choir service by candlelight

The choir's candlelight service at the United Church Sunday evening was impressively presented. For the traditional Christmas Eve program, candelabra light the front of the church and the aisles. Choir director and organist Dr. George Elliott directed the choir, the program including selections by Handel and Hayden, old french carols, a calypso, Barry Buchanan and Roberta Nessellet took solo parts. The congregation joined in familiar carols.

Best Wishes for 1973 to Everyone!

May I extend my grateful appreciation to the members of the various municipal groups that contribute to the welfare of the town. Many hours of personal effort and interest are extended by these public-spirited citizens who serve on the Boards and Committees. It is only fitting at the year end that this contribution to the Municipality be publicly recognized. I personally recognize the efforts of all people, be it business or recreation.
