Look for new solutions to Hydro-town problems

Bookkeeping difficulties between the municipality and Acton Hydro will hopefully be cleared up by a conference between retiring town clerk J. T. Hurst and hydro secretary Audrey Urquhart.

The town wanted hydro to supply them with a breakdown of work they do for the municipality but the difference in bookkeeping systems created difficulties. The town must have a breakdown of the various hydro activities to qualify for certain grants but Mayor Les Duby said he was sure the misunderstandings, which were blamed on Queen's Park, could be cleared up to everyone's satisfaction.

The other misunderstanding — why hydro books must be audited by auditors from the town as well as their own hydro audit — has so far defied solution.

The mayor told the hydro commission it was mandatory for the town to audit the books of all commissions, as outlined in the Act. However, Commissioner Ted Tyler objected to the commission paying for it.

"Our books are already audited by Hydro; other bodies are only paying one audit fee — we pay two," he stated.

The mayor said he would try and find out what others do, because in his view the town had the right to audit the books, but he agreed it seemed foolish for books to be audited twice and for hydro to pay twice. He said he would refer the dilemma to the appropriate council committee.
