A little note came in the mall, the other day, asking what I thought the best way to travel out west (or anywhere in Canada, for that matter) might be. And all I can say is "It all depends."

When Gord and I head out this summer, we'll be flying, mainly because time is rather important. If we went by train, bus, or car, we could figure on almost an extra week being tacked on to our holidays, and I'd rather spend that time here.

On a plane, the seats are comfortable, the food quite good, but the trip a little on the boring side if you've got nothing to read or nobody to talk to.

The train is nice if you want to relax and unwind before you get to where you're going. It's better for sightseeing, of course, and you can wander around and stretch your legs whenever you

A few years ago, we went west by CP Rail and returned by CN. CP had far better food and was far cleaner than CN. I was a little put out by CN's lack of cleanliness.

.The bus was the best of all, as far as sight-seeing, but it wasn't too good for sleeping, although we managed to doze when we got tired enough. The food, of course, was at rest stops, and wasn't particularly good. One thing I'll may to remember if I go by bus again, is to make sure I have a good supply of dimes to get in the ladies' washrooms. I always had to go hunt up Gord for some change. All in all, the prices vary so little, by the time you've added up all expenses, that you might as well travel which ever way suits your purpose best.

The plane gets you there fastest, the train is more relaxing, and the bus is more interesting.

Remember meah

Back to fares, for a minute the bus might sound cheaper, but we found the meals added a fair bit on. Some of the train fares include meals (good ones), and both the plane and train have family rates. I'm not sure, but I don't think the bus did.

By car? Well, as I said, we've tried it. I wouldn't mind a vacation where we were just puttering along, going no place in particular and in no hurry, but it seems that when we're driving, we always have to be somewhere at a certain date. And that means no extra stops or sidetrips.

As a matter of fact, if Gord had his way, he wouldn't even stop at night. Once he gets going, he hates to stop. Me, I get car-sick when I'm either tired or hungry, and have no interest in just going "a little further". The only time I get any co-operation is when I threaten to follow through from the quessiness to its natural

To go out west, I think by the time we added up the expense of motels, restaurants, and wear on the car, (as well as gas,) it would cost us less to fly.

The one advantage is that you can stop when you like, or take a sidetrip to visit somebody (if you

And that's all I can think of off-

And now a recipe. I've been digging around and finding lowcalorie ones to get me back in some sort of shape for the summer. They might be of some interest to somebody else.
