Life is different, with a "live-in" rabbit around. We nover know when he's going to pop up, or just what he has in mind.

The cats have a "milk meaow" and an "out meaow"; the dogs have a certain look when they're hungry, and their mellow "oul" noises reverberate throughout the house. But Rabbit just sits there mutely on his haunches and looks onigmatic. It's up to us to figure out what he wants. Usually it's a huge bunch of alfalfa, fresh-picked. It disappears in an amazingly short time, one strand at a time, like spaghetti, being eaten by a kid.

Mohammed in clover Last week, after endless trips out to the clover patch, I decided to take Mohammed to his mountain, Depositing Rabbit in the middle of the patch, I stretched out on a blanket to watch. The footwork was fantastic! And every few minutes Rab would head back to his cage, circle it at full speed twice, then flop down as close to me as possible, just to assure himself he wasn't deserted, I think.

These days, Rabbit goes out first thing in the morning, staying not all day. He and an 18-inch gram snake live in the big pile of cedar rails out the front making the odd trip over to the drive to serval on the warm gravel (just Rab-net the smake.) I'm going to have to put a sign up warning drivers to watch for him.

Name to note After a few hours on his own, Rabbit is overjoyed if someone walks by. Then his sitting up means he wants to be picked up and cuddled. Even more than a cat be basks in affection. He closes his eyes, flattens his ears back, grinds his teeth softly, and sticks a very soft small, furry nose against the person's skin, often right under their own nose, if he can reach. That's when the cuddling becomes difficult, I've found. While a cat's whiskers stick out to the sides, Rabbit's curl out to the

Both Cooper and OSSTF president Tom Ramautarsingh indicated negotiations during the aix or seven meetings had been carried out amicably and in a professional manner.

Raises amounted to an average of eight per cent in the elementary school panel and 8.1 per cent in the secondary panel. While the increase is higher than that settled in Hamilton, it is slightly lower than Peel's and considerably lower than what Toronto is expected to settle for. First year

First year teachers in the elementary schools will earn from $5,700 to $9,100 depending on qualifications. The maximum an elementary teacher will earn is $17,500.

Elementary school principals will earn from $17,500 to $22,500 while vice-principals will earn $2,400 plus their salary scale or $14,500, whichever is greater.

Co-ordinators will earn from $19,500 to $22,000 while assistant co-ordinators earn from $18,500 to $20,000.

In both panels the board will pay 75 per cent of OHIP, 75 per cent of the Extended Health Care plan and 75 per cent of the group insurance program to a maximum of $25,000 insurance.

A first year teacher in the secondary school panel will earn from $7,400 to $9,100 while the maximum a teacher in the secondary schools can earn will be $17,500. High school principals will earn between $21,750 and $25,500 while vice-principals will earn a minimum of $19,250 and a maximum of $21,500.
