A new game

Name the town

What do you think the new municipality of North Halton should be called?

Free Press readers have the opportunity to become involved in naming the new town composed of Acton, Esquesing and Georgetown, merely by filling in their suggestion and name in the coupon below and sending it to the Acton Free Press, Willow St., Acton.

All the suggestions will be turned over to Mayor Les Duby and he will see they are presented to the committee selected to pick the name and are published. The mayor said this gave the opportunity to people here to become involved in the regional government decisions and enable them to pick a name that would be acceptable and reflect the area.

Just fill out the coupon below:

Members of Halton County Council's Administration Committee agree public information and input into the Waste Management Study currently being conducted is important but they turned down a public information project that would cost $33,000. Members felt input could be gained without a $33,000 price

County engineer Jack Corbett sald a consulting socialogist had suggested a four-phase plan would help avoid confrontation with elements of the public.

technical committee representing the county and representatives of James F. McLaren agreed the public education program should go ahead if the province would pick up the $33,000.

Milton Deputy Reeve Marjory Powys suggested it seemed like brainwashing and she suggested public meetings could be held without all of the expense.

Unnecessary expense Warden Anne MacArthur suggested McLaren had been engaged at a cost of $60,000 to do the study and now that firm wanted to ease some of the load onto other consultants.

Members noted other cases in municipal experience where public input had been gained at no expense to the province or the

Ottawa Report

Terry O'Connor — Halton MP

The Canadian Parliament buildings are venerable and majestic structures representing the finest examples of Gothic architecture in North America. Elaborate stone carvings adorn all doorways and most windows as well as the arched hallways and chambers in all three buildings. The famous Peace Tower provides the focal point of "The Hill" and can be seen and heard from many miles around. The 30 acre site of the centre, east and west blocks, as they are called, is located high on a rock promontory overlooking the Ottawa river. Queen Victoria chose Ottawa to be the capital in December of 1857 and construction of the first parliament buildings commenced in December of 1859. Skilled stonemasons from Britain, Germany and the U.S. were hired to work with the special stone quarried in the Napian Township 12 miles away. Originally designed to cost a million dollars, the costs soon soared out of sight and work stopped while a Royal Cominvestigated situation. Sounds familiar?

Finally finished With the work stoppage all the skilled men went home and construction was delayed for 18 months. However finally completed in 1868, the original buildings cost four million

Liberal Leader George Brown protested that the buildings were 500 years ahead of their time. He said it was going to cost half of the revenue of Canada to heat, light and keep them clean. Well, now, that's some comment. Imagine playing politics with our very parliament buildings! Tsk, Tsk, Mr. Brown. On February 3, 1916, the entire centre block except for the library was destroyed by fire. Construction of the larger and more gracious present building commenced immediately after the fire and was completed in 1920. The centre block houses the Commons and Senate chambers

Secret passageways The buildings abound in turrets, five and six-sided rooms, as well as over 100 Senators' and Members' offices and their walls and staircases, secret passageways and breathtaking

However space, or the lack of it, has always been a problem. Originally MPs did not have offices, the position being parttime and then for only a few months of every year. Up until 10 years ago two Members shared an office, some of which were hardly larger than broom closets—the offices that is.

But things are looking up. For the first time the offices of some MPs are located off the Hill-in the Confederation Building about 200 yds. west of the West Block.

To truly appreciate Canada's fine seat of government a personal visit is necessary. When you are in Ottawa drop in to my office and I will be happy to give you a cook's tour. If you have a problem, idea comment, criticism get in touch with me at 845-0222.
