

Play, learn at Science Centre

Nobody says 'don't touch' at the Ontario Science Centre so the grade four pupils from Robert Little School had a hey day last Friday turning knobs, twisting dials, pressing buttons and touching everything they could get their hands on.

Children learn by doing and handling the goods is part of the learning experience at the child-oriented paradise in Don Mills.

The two busloads of nine and ten year olds accompanied by teachers and volunteer parents spent all day manipulating spacecraft, musical instruments and machines of all kinds. They got to see how things work on the inside as well as outside.

During a film presentation and lecture on air pollution the students learned that pollution can kill. They were told that nobody owns the air so it's a great place to put garbage. Even if we burn our garbage it goes into the air. The instructor stressed the importance of doing away with excess packaging and said the best container in the world is an ice cream cone - because we eat it.

GETTING THERE is half the fun. On a trip to the Science Centre grade four classes from Robert Little get a view of Don Valley on the way to the exhibits.

STANDING ON a giant lever these pupils balance themselves against 150 lb. weight, in the science arcade where participation is part of the fun.

CONTROLLING spaceship at Science Centre, Jody Sheppard and Irma Porte receive tape-recorded instructions while they take an imaginary journey through space which is shown on a video-screen in front of ship.

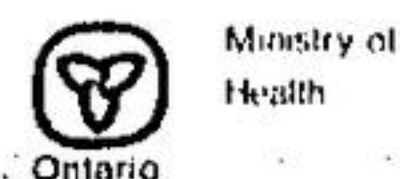

LITTLE but mighty Mrs. Gorjup tests her strength while supervising a group of six grade four students on the science centre field trip.

New CAS offices If you're overweight formally opened this course may help

Frank Thompson of Milton, a former director of Halton Children's Aid Society, was the guest of honor at the official opening of the new CAS offices on Blair Rd. in Burlington last week.

Mr. Thompson cut the ceremonial ribbon at the open house attended by 80 people representing a wide group of social service agencies throughout the county. A wine and cheese party was held as guests mingled in the spacious, artistically decorated offices.

Orange loop-twist carpet covers the entire 6,200 square feet and continues up the wall for six inches. This eliminates the need for baseboards. Vinyl walls in alternating shades of brown and beige are installed on steel tracks. The property of CAS, they can be removed at any time and relocated to enlarge or change the shape of an area.

Formerly Milton The new offices consolidate the activities of three former locations. The former head office on Hugh St. in Milton, which had been in operation since 1918, is now used as Halton Region Police Milton headquarters.

Interview offices are planned throughout the county so that clients will have easy access to their social workers.

People in North Halton who are not too keen on their eating habits or what it's doing to them will have the chance to physically set things straight.

With overweight being the number one health problem in Canada and iron, protein and thiamine deficiencies following, the Halton Regional Health Unit is holding weight control classes at 130 Guelph St., Georgetown, beginning Feb. 13 at 7 p.m.

Miss Dorothy Craig, Director of Halton Health Unit, said the 10 week course will be stressing sound nutritional aspects which lead to safe weight reduction.

Anyone interested in attending the course should call 877-2238. Applicants should be at least 20 lbs. overweight and will be requested to have a medical examination from their family physician. The registration fee is $5.

Inscription on Bibles

Halton Hills councillors will have a permanent memento of the inaugural meeting of the first council of the amalgamated towns of Georgetown, Acton and the township of Esquesing.

Miss Dorothy Stone, well known artist who lives on 17 Sideroad, engraved a personal inscription on each bible for the councillors. The bibles were used at the ceremony when members took the oath of office.

Lost control $270 damages

Heather O'Neil of Acton, lost control of her car on Jan. 31, police report, striking a fence off Trafalgar Road in Stewarttown.

No personal injuries were reported but an estimated $270 damage was done to the vehicle she was driving.

POLLUTION can kill and Donna Cavlovic demonstrates where pollution goes in hot and cold weather by releasing a green liquid in hot water and in cold water.

JAYE GERTH operates controls in a partial replica of LEM spacecraft which served as lifeboat for Capt. James Lovell and two companions during journey to earth in 1970.
