

Home sewing highlighted at Y's Menettes' annual fashion show

Women - and three boys - who do their own sewing were models at the Y's Menettes annual fashion show Wednesday at the M. Z. Bennett school. Seeing neighbors and friends, with their children, modelling their own creations adds extra pleasure for the audience and applause was generous. A few of those on the stage were wearing garments made by mothers or daughters. As commentator, Margaret Wallis mentioned the low cost of most of the attractive garments. The centennial-year home sewers show began with a contrast - treasured old-fashioned gowns, bonnets and parasols brought from attics and worn for the evening by Vivian Smith, Elva Pearen, Emily Wallace and Evelyn Aitken. The show ended with a bridal party.

Crafts A display of hobbies at the back of the gym was particularly interesting, including an unusual raised decoupage. Crocheting, needlework and other items of sewing were included.

With patterns, materials and ingenuity, Y's Menettes and their friends created the over 50 items on the program. Young girls also showed clothing made in home ec classes.

The three boys who made their own overalls and shirt were Jim, Steve and Geoff Saxon.

NANCY ALDRIDGE modelled her own home-sewn wedding gown at the Y's Menettes show. A bridal tableau ended the program.

EMBROIDERED picture made by Sally Leatherland is admired by Kathy Toth, Diane Baginski and Kim Jackson at the Y's Menettes fashion show.

STACEY and Michelle Perry showed sister look-alike dresses.

CONTRAST AT the Y's Menettes fashion show was presented by Emily Wallace, Elva Pearen, Evelyn Aitken and Vivian Smith Wednesday. They provided a look back into the past for centennial year before the mini-skirt and slack suits parade began.

PERKY IN red outfits, Kevin and Kim Usher strolled through the crowds with their seamstress mother, Ann.

SHEILA Stackhouse showed a smart Scottish outfit for evenings.

After a rather lengthy business period, the devotions were taken by Mrs. Masters reading Psalm 27, and Mrs. Hansen led in prayer. Mrs. S. Matthews read a poem entitled I Visited The Holy Land and also The Legend Of The Dogwood Tree.

Lunch was served by the committee for the month, and everyone enjoyed a social half-hour.

The interruption in mail service due to the illegal strike has naturally delayed the appearance of some news and pictures in the Free Press. Sorry!
