Have clients looking for homes in the country-small or large Northern support Her speech received applause from members from Milton and Halton Hills. Burlington Councillor Vern Connell had pointed out 66 per cent of the regional roads are in the north but the two northern communities provide only 20 per cent of the assessment. He claimed this to be an inequity.

Mayor Harry Barrett claimed the province had created problems with the new boundaries. He said there was no intent at the region to rlp anyone off.

Same deal Milton councillor Jim Watson wondered If the same philosophy would be supported by members from the south in connection with the social and family service department, and in particular welfare. He noted that most of the funds for those departments were spent in the southern communities where the heaviest populations
