

Hold the line committee says

Halton Public Works Committee wrestled with a $2,721,200 budget for road and bridge maintenance and construction Wednesday but were unable to cut the necessary $144,000 from the budget to stay within the amount that would be subsidizable to the province. The committee instructed engineer Bob Baillie to report back to the committee before exceeding the amount for which subsidy is approved. Cut projects Baillie told the committee the only real way of staying within the subsidizable limits was to defer one of the major construction projects. Committee members suggested it wasn't likely that all of the work planned would be proceeded with until next year at any rate and hoped their budget woes would work themselves out.

Easier

Two streakers apparently got weary running up the highway from Milton and started hitch-hiking instead. They got picked up, too. Maybe by the police?
