Cutting CAS budget reduces Ont. grants

Regional Council's Services Committee will ask the council to reconsider budget cuts demanded of the Halton Children's Aid Society. While the regional share of the budget would be reduced by $5,055 the budget cut would cost the CAS $18,720.

Cuts made by the region cause automatic loss of grants from the province. The provincial grant is based on the amount of money the region is agreeable to raise. To cut $5,055 from the regional share would mean an overall reduction in the CAS budget of $18,720.

With the exception of Halton Hills Mayor Tom Hill, the committee endorsed treasurer Don Farmer's recommendation that the committee cut the contribution by $1,055 - reducing the overall cut to $4,000.

Farmer noted CAS representatives felt they could live with a $4,000 cut but not an $18,720 reduction. Hill felt the CAS should live within the budget as established by council. He felt leniency in that case would bring requests from other departments.

Hill claimed CAS officials did the same thing each year and presented cuts that were made. Other members of the committee felt the board had made as many cuts as it could. Committee defeated Hill's move to defend the treasurer's recommendation. At that point Hill said the committee had no choice but to take the decision to council.

Committee vetoes do

Halton Region's Administration Committee rejected a request from the Halton Region Clerks and Treasurers Association to host a luncheon meeting of the association.

Committee members viewed the meeting as more of a social gathering than a business session, after reading a report which indicated golf would be the feature of the afternoon session.

The Association had requested $400 to cover the cost of lunch for the 50 or 60 officials attending. Some members of the committee favored the officials getting together for a business meeting but most felt the meeting was set up as more of a social gathering than a business session and weren't prepared to support it.
