

ROSS SEGSWORTH of Burlington is chairman of the Halton Committee which is organizing the 1974 International Plowing Match, in conjunction with the Ontario Plowmen's Association.

Come and meet some of your local Bell team at the International Plowing Match (Sept. 24-28) on the W.T. Craig Reid farm two miles south of Georgetown on the Ashgrove sideroad. Our girls will be staffing a message centre there to help get notes to the many exhibitors. There will also be a pair-o-metric (cable) splicing display and cable burying demonstrations. Plus a time-spanning display featuring telecommunications over the last 100 years. We're looking forward to meeting you, now that Halton Plowmen have a chance to host this world-famous event. Drop in, say hello. It's an opportunity to ask any questions about your service.

Check plow parts

Whether you plow in the spring, the fall, or both, one thing is for sure: It feels good to have the plowing done. But don't let yourself think things are finished until that plow is properly cared for and put away.

Taking a little time to put your plow away properly will save you time when you need the plow later. And it may save you money by reducing the number of parts you'll need to buy.

With these thoughts in mind, read the following check list of things to do when you've finished plowing:

CHECK LIST

—Clean all soil-engaging parts and apply a heavy coating of grease to prevent rust.

—Make a thorough visual inspection of the plow. Check for worn or broken parts and make notes of them for replacement during the off season.

—Check nuts and bolts for tightness and tighten as needed.

—If plow has hydraulic reset, check system pressure. Maintain recommended pressure in accumulator.

—If plow is to be stored outside, cover accumulator and hydraulic gauge with waterproof canvas or black plastic film (clear plastic film will attract moisture).

—Plug and cover hydraulic couplers to keep them clean and protected from weather.

—Store hoses in hose frame.

—Check pressure in tires and inflate to recommended pressure.
