HALLIDAY HOMES LTD.
YOU SIMPLY CAN'T DO ANY BETTER

My life in the listening business

BY BETTY KENNEDY

I find hosting an interview show is a lot easier than explaining how you do it. I don't think you can be in this business without being genuinely curious about people, about their lives, and the million things that make them different from each other.

But a person's difference doesn't always show on the surface and you can't force it out. It takes a lot of listening, not only to the person's words but to the hidden man or woman behind them.

My main effort is always to make the person feel at ease, to let my guests know the moment they walk into the studio that they'll be treated with respect and thoughtfulness. Putting people on the spot or deliberately embarrassing them doesn't interest me. I want them to relax and explore the things that really mean something to them.

When a long-time international star tells you candidly she has no difficulty relating to huge audiences, it's only in one-to-one relationships she can never make it, you know you have reached that person. She becomes a real person talking, not just a stage personality. It's that kind of response that suddenly makes an interview take off. What I am after is exactly that personal, human quality of a guest which can often lend a new perspective to a story. Many things about a good interview are the intangibles you simply can't explain. The tangibles are easy enough—the amount of homework done in advance and your own ability to concentrate completely on the guest.

If someone controversial is presenting an unpopular view, the listening audience is entitled to a fair and impartial presentation. I believe it is the audience, not the interviewer, who judges the merits of a guest. Audiences have a lot of common sense and are quite capable of arriving at their own decisions.

Broadcasting takes you into many different worlds, but always it is the people, what they think, what they feel, why they do the things they do, that count most.

Personally yours
Betty Kennedy
