Kerr for devotions. Her topic was Faith. Hymns, scripture passages and readings were used to bring out its meaning. Various matters of interest and business were transacted. A dainty lunch was served at the close. Courtesy convener was Mrs. W. Thompson.

Party

The Hallowe'en party Friday evening was a roaring success. The ladies of the C.C.W. sponsored the costume contest and awarded prizes to the assortment of spooks and sprites.

The judges were Mrs. Chester Allan and Mr. W. Thompson who had the difficult task of choosing among the wild and original costumes.

Members of the Sunday School took turns in directing games. The evening ended with a delicious lunch served by the ladies under the leadership of Mrs. W. Thompson.

Halton's Director of Education

Jim Singleton will retire at year end

With a full career in education behind him, Halton Director of Education Jim Singleton will retire at the end of this school year from the highest post with the Halton Board of Education.

Singleton announced his planned retirement as director at the Halton Board Thursday night and to the principals prior to that.

His retirement will conclude 15 years of work in Halton education. Singleton came to the region in 1959 to become the director of the Burlington Board of Education, and 10 years later in 1969 he was selected as Director of the newly formed Halton County Board of Education.

In a statement sent to all employees the director paid tribute to the students, the staff and the trustees.

"Young people are increasingly competent and highly responsible in the main. Service to young people and faith in them is a worthy calling for any person, particularly when the goal is to develop them into socially responsible and personally mature citizens."

He referred to the staff as the finest group of individuals he had ever worked with.

The Halton administrative group and consulting staff are the envy of practically all other systems who have been in contact with us, both Canadian and American. Both these groups are often misunderstood and frequently unappreciated. Those of us who have worked with them realize how invaluable their contribution has been.

Singleton told reporters he was never a believer in hanging on beyond his time. "I have great confidence that a new face, new ideas, new leadership are good things for most organizations at frequent intervals."

Some gardening

Asked about plans for his future, the 56-year-old Singleton indicated there are a number of volunteer jobs he would like to undertake and noted he has had offers from educational agencies and private business. "I plan to do some gardening, but I won't vegetate," he told reporters. Mr. and Mrs. Singleton recently renovated an old stone farmhouse on Guelph Line south of Campbellville.

For Singleton his six years as Halton Director have periodically featured rocky times as pressure from individuals, press or organizations mounted.

There was a great hue and cry when the several school boards in the region were amalgamated in 1969 under one roof and ramifications of that amalgamation were feared.

While the kinks were worked out of the system in time, other pressures erupted from time to time. The most recent example of such pressure was the formation of the Halton Renaissance Committee which heaped criticism on the director.

New challenges

"I realize there are some who may attempt to read into my retirement special and private reasons of their own. That is their problem, not mine. Please be assured that the simple reasons are that I have made the major contribution I felt I could make and I am still young enough to accept new challenges in other areas of social useful endeavors," he said.

Following the announcement board chairman Bill Priestner reviewed

Singleton's history in Halton. "Jim Singleton is perhaps the most important figure in education in Ontario in the last 15 years. He has been a pioneer in innovations of both an educational and organizational nature."

Priestner reviewed Singleton's leadership in bringing together four boards to form the Burlington Board and then later amalgamating all of the boards in Halton.

"I have worked with Jim Singleton since 1965 and have never ceased to be amazed by the man's incisive thinking, decisive action and dedication to the educational enterprise in Halton," the chairman said.

Due debt

"The people of Halton owe a great deal to Jim Singleton but that is always the way when we deal with great people. Someone said the measure of a man is the effect that he has on others. It is virtually impossible to have known him without having been changed by the encounter."

Prior to coming to Halton, Singleton taught in elementary and secondary schools in North York after being educated in Toronto. He served with the 1st Canadian Tank Brigade from 1940 to 1945 with service in England, Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium and Holland. He entered as a private and retired as Lieutenant Colonel. His accomplishments in education are many and varied. In addition to his many efforts locally he has served and provided leadership provincially, federally and internationally.

He has provided leadership provincially in professional organization such as the Association of Directors in Ontario, has served as the first chairman of the Ontario Association of Education Officials, the first president of Ontario Council for Leadership in Education, and as a member of the Board of Governors of Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. He was named as one of the first "Fellows of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education" in 1973.

Speaker, leader

Beyond Halton he has given his time and talents as a speaker and leader at Headmaster conferences, Principal and Vice-Principal conferences provincially and at Professional Development Days for teachers groups throughout Ontario.

At the Ministry of Education, Singleton served on two separate committees dealing with teacher training at the elementary and secondary levels. Significant reports were produced and many of the recommendations have been incorporated into the teacher training schools.

He has been a speaker and contributor to Canadian Education Association on several occasions, and was the keynote speaker at many other educational group meetings in other provinces of Canada.

As a result of his work in O.C.L.E.A., Singleton has had an opportunity to participate in National Academy of Superintendents of Education at meetings in Washington, Columbus, Ohio and Montreal. In addition he has worked with the University Council for Educational Administration.

Local trustee Tom Watson says Mr. Singleton is one of the outstanding educators in North America today. "We have been very fortunate to have his leadership," Mr. Watson says. "And he leaves us in a position of having developed our own leadership."
