

Debate s'mobiles

Those interested in snowmobile regulations will be heard at the next meeting of the Milton Council administration committee, members agreed after studying by-laws now affecting various parts of the town.

The present urban Milton by-law will be considered a base for discussion with a clause added from the Oakville by-law.

Mayor Anne MacArthur emphasized that Milton has a lot of rural area and she would not like to see regulations too strict on snowmobiles in the rural areas. She suggested snowmobiles should be encouraged in the rural areas.

Members of the committee felt snowmobile club representatives might want to discuss by-law provisions and they should be given the opportunity at the next committee meeting. It was also agreed that any others interested in the snowmobile by-law would be heard at that time.

"I feel the snowmobile isn't as evil as it's made out to be," Mayor MacArthur concluded.

Council queries day care

The Community Services Committee of Halton Regional Council was approached last week regarding the taking over of the May Court Service Club day care centre in Oakville.

The May Court Club delegation, headed by Mrs. Peter Wright of Oakville, suggested the Region assume control of the nursery by June 1975. The service club can no longer support the project.

Day care would be available to all region residents should council accept the May Court recommendation.

Opposes closure

Regional Councillor Tom Sutherland was enraged when he became what he felt was the victim of closure during a meeting of Halton Regional Council.

Council was debating standards for communal wells in rural subdivisions. Sutherland asked permission to speak but meeting chairman Ernie Sykes had already called the vote. Sykes ruled Sutherland had waited too long to express a desire to speak.

Support Sutherland challenged the chairman's rule. When council supported Sykes in his decision not to hear Sutherland, the councillor said the action was similar to what they called closure in Ottawa. "This is ridiculous. You people should be ashamed. Never mind, I saw the hands that went up," he shouted amidst laughter from colleagues.

Forecast of staff requested

Concerned about being "nickel and dimed to death," Halton Regional Council has requested Administrator Ernest Reed to prepare a report indicating the staff needs that will be required until the end of 1976.

Burlington Councillor Jack Balfus said he wanted to look at the entire staff needs of the region, rather than one or two people every meeting or so.

Administration and Finance Chairman Ric Morrow agreed with the proposition but noted it should be used as a guide. He said there might be some situations where new staffers were urgently required as a result of a change of circumstances or workload that could not have been forecasted.

Yule do at museum

Members of Halton Region Council will join the staff of the Halton Museum at the Kelso Conservation Area for a Christmas social event Dec. 8. It was decided at a Community Services meeting last week.
