A Friendly Welcome Awaits You.

SNOW BLOWS across the Esquesing-Nassagaweya town line during the first wild snowstorm of the season Monday. Bad weather was blamed for keeping out many voters in Eramosa and Erin.

Want politicians to be negotiators Plan policies

Halton Region's Administration and Finance Committee wants political people involved in the collective bargaining process.

Personnel Director Dennis Camm recommended that the councillors stay away from the bargaining table. He reasoned that the political people represent the final phase of the bargaining process.

He claimed that he and his team of negotiators may find themselves in a position where they would like to reserve a decision until they pass the matter to a council committee. He felt this would be difficult to do, with the committee representatives at the table.

Embarrassing
He noted too, that negotiations can break down and a strike of considerable duration could be embarrassing for political members of the committee.

The majority of councillors felt elected officials should be present during negotiation meetings, even if they were there as silent partners. They objected to senior staffers negotiating with other staff persons and felt public interest could be better guarded if political people were present.

function. He hoped regional staff could take a more enlightened, more sincere attitude in the future. He feared the policies would be so all-encompassing that they crippled local planners in efforts to carry out the local function.

Zsadanyi listed a number of concerns he had. He felt the policies should make some provision for development in the village settlements such as Campbellville, Brookville and Moffat. The policies make no comment on the region's stand concerning communal wells. Regional Public Works Director Bob Baillie has been asked to develop standards for communal wells he'll find acceptable.

Zsadanyi expressed concern about "the" amount of interference he could expect from the region concerning commercial development in the town.

Snowmobiles start season

The first snowfall brought out the first snowmobiles—and the first complaint of noise to police this week. The complaint came from the Kingham Rd. area.

Police were also informed of the theft of the flag from the post office Nov. 28.

Another complaint was about a barking dog.

There was one impaired driver apprehended by the police.

Sauna fixed

Anne Pickering, Centennial pool supervisor, expects the ladies' sauna to be fixed today. (Wednesday).

The sauna has been out of commission due to faulty wiring and has deprived the female adults of a sauna. Some feel this is discrimination, but now that the problem is cleared up, hopefully, the women can rest assured.

The sauna is open during adults swimming hours.

There have not been nearly so many accidents since equipment has become standardized and the tools needed for their repair or adjustment have become fewer. St. John Ambulance notes.

Directory assistance not chargeable 'til '75

Penalty charges to Bell Telephone customers requiring directory assistance will not be effective in the Acton district until some time in March, according to information received from Jim Reid, public relations manager for the Bell, recently.

Mr. Reid says the service charge of 25 cents is already being applied to the Toronto and Hamilton areas in Ontario. In the 519 code areas, customers in the Kitchener-Waterloo range will not be charged for information calls until the spring of '75. He gives the approximate date of March 9 when the charging will begin. It will include residents of Guelph, Acton, Rockwood, Elmira, Cambridge and other places.

According to the spokesman, the only calls for which customers will be charged will be those where numbers are listed in their telephone books. There will be no charge for calls to areas where listings are not contained in their directories. Residence customers will be allowed three calls for directory assistance before being penalized.

Information calls from coin telephone booths, lobbies of hotels and motels, hospitals run or registered by provincial and federal governments, mobile telephones and any business services for use of disabled people or senior citizens will not be chargeable. Also included as charges of exemption, are old-age homes or those for the mentally retarded or disabled.

Mr. Reid points out that people unable to use the directory because of some disability, can request exemption so that calls from their residence will not be charged. "Any senior citizen over 65 who requests exemption receives the same courtesy," says the Bell representative. Mr. Reid says exemption forms are available at company public offices. He adds that a telephone call to local business offices requesting forms to be sent by mail will be acted on promptly. "The Bell will be pleased to send exemption forms in the mail to customers to save the necessity of making a trip to the business offices," he said.

Mr. Reid explains that numerous calls come in regularly asking for directory assistance but that 70 percent of the calls are made for numbers in the customers' own directories. The new charges are to discourage the same people constantly requesting assistance. "Instead of penalizing all customers by charging higher rates, only those using the service will pay their own costs," said Mr. Reid.

According to the official, the public will be notified via radio, telephone and newspaper when the charges will be effected.
