Headed Canada's delegation

Dr. Philbrook's experience advantage to government

It's getting easier for Dr. Frank Philbrook to get overseas. When he was a young medical student in the early 1950's, he and his wife tried for five years to get someone to send them to work in developing countries as Canadian representatives. Now that he's in Ottawa as Halton's MP, it's much easier.

He's just returned home from Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon) where he headed Canada's three-man delegation to the fourth Commonwealth Medical Conference at the request of external affairs minister Allan MacEachen.

People unhealthy "The trip rounded off our experiences in the sub-continent," he said Friday night, speaking to members of the United Breeders Association. "Ceylon is on the equator and just like a South Pacific tropical island, it looks terrifically lush. It looks as if you could live off the land without even cultivating it but the people are not healthy."

Dr. Philbrook told of the high mortality rate there and spoke of the need for further aid to these developing countries.

He showed slides of his six years of work in developing countries. He was two years in India and four in Pakistan.

Medical mission As a doctor in a medical mission in India he made $200 per month. He then worked for four years on the construction of a dam in Pakis-lan. He considers the "sacred cow" of India "a piece of irony in today's world. The cow in Canada is better off than her poor cousin in India even though we eventually kill her." He showed pictures of the neglected animals, small, skinny and diseased yet wandering at will through the streets of India.

Upon return from India, Dr. Philbrook worked in medical research with a pharmaceutical firm. He was concerned with the overpopulation of the developing countries and worked toward a solution to the problem.

"There is no point in putting birth control measures into the water supply," he explained. "Most water comes from wells in those countries."

HALTON'S MP Dr. Frank Philbrook spoke Friday evening to members of the United Breeders Association at their annual dinner at Ligny Hall. Halton's Agricultural Representative Henry Stanley listens intently as Dr. Philbrook tells of malnutrition in the developing countries.
