

Reflections of the past

..... Speckled throughout the towns and countryside of North Halton are the homes of our Scottish ancestors, the picturesque stone houses of yesteryear. Most are set back from the road adding to the mystery, the romance and the uniqueness of our past. They are a sharp contrast to the hastily-erected new homes of today. Stone houses reflect the hard work needed to build the past so we could have the present and future.

