Ask weed get tough

Weed inspector Doug Currie was encouraged to go about his job "with all vigor" on agricultural lands within the town during a meeting of Milton's Community Service Committee Monday night. Mr. Currie attended a meeting of the committee to discuss his function and in particular a complaint from Burlin Construction concerning a bill for $510 to cut weeds. Currie advised the committee that the seed act insisted on weeds being cut but did not require any notice to be given to the landowner.

notification. Councillor Art Melanson suggested a weekly notice in the paper might help. "You'd have to put in the Globe," chairman Rick Day quipped, alluding to the fact many landowners live in Toronto. Currie told the committee there were several people who owned large tracts of land and paid bills of $1,000 to $1,200 per year for weed control, but wouldn't rent the land. The committee agreed to consider imposing a surcharge to cover costs of administration. Currie's bill of $2,586 is hoped to be covered by a surcharge. Weed cutters receive $10 per hour. Some municipalities charge 25 per cent surcharge on top of the $10 per hour fee. The committee agreed to consider a roadside spraying program to control weeds as well.
