

Large crowd at Robert Little Open House

HARMONY IN HALLWAYS was an interesting musical feature of the Open House program at Robert Little. Teacher David Mashinter is seen conducting the triple duet in the main hall. Included are singers Vicki Dowle, Nancy Wong, Paul Moore, Patti Tufford and Heather Glenister.

Over 1,000 parents, students and friends visited the Robert Little school for the annual Open House. Cooking sessions, art, science, other displays and even music in the hallways, kept the large numbers attending, moving from room to room to see all the interesting features.

In the early hours of the program, outdoor track and field events were conducted. Parents were able to see their children in action and watch how ably they performed in the various feats. Inside, parents of young daughters discovered they could, after all, contribute to the family cooking requirements. They watched while delicious cookies were prepared in large batches.

Video-taped shows. A kindergarten presentation of Goldilocks and the Three Bears was the delight of parents of small fry. In the resource centre, many gathered to watch results of a week-long session of videotaped workmanship. These were accomplishments of students who produced and presented their own mini-plays. The audience gathered hopefully to see their own offspring or friends on the screen. Viewers were delighted with the performances.

Grade six playlets and a variety show were the auditorium activity which kept people attending stopping in periodically to pick some other act of the continuous show.

Participating in the open house were students from kindergarten to grade eight. Vice-principal Gary Bateman was enthusiastic at the response. He said about two-thirds of parents of the school's student body had attended the open house. He felt it was both well received and as always, very worthwhile.
