Something odd happened the other day that made me realize how helpless a person can become in certain situations. Potentially serious, the situation this time was both funny and frustrating.

I was sitting in the emergency room at the hospital waiting for a friend when a man walked by with a young boy of four or five.

After awhile I noticed a small commotion at the desk. The purse, on asking the man the usual questions found that he couldn't speak English and was unable to say who the boy was or what was wrong with

A second nurse was called and she went through variations of the same questions with very little reaults.

The elector brought in knew enough of two or three languages to ask if the man spoke them. He didn't. The nurses tried to get hold of other people who spoke another language, but lines were busy or people out.

All through this, the little absent-mindedly asked him a direct question "Where do you hurt?"

He immediately held up his fund to show a bee sting, and on being asked, gave his name. In this great world of automation, computation, and applications, nobody thought to ask anything of the patient!

Things moved a bit faster after that: The boy's parents were away and the man looking after him was his uncle.

Then they hit another snag. The nurse produced a prescription that had to be picked up at the drug store. Another five minutes was spent trying to get this across to the man, with instructions to the boy to take him there. Total confusion reigned.

Finally, I couldn't stand it any longer, went to the deak, and suggested I drive them to the drug store, help them pick up the prescription, and bring them back.

The nurses seemed relieved to have everything solved. and said they'd phone ahead to the pharmacy to inform them of the problem.

It was easy enough to get the man and boy outside, then difficulties started. How do you tell a person with no English "Look, I know you don't know where we're going or what we're going for, but let's go in my truck and I'll bring you straight back after-

Anyhow, when the boy headed for the truck, the uncle did too and away we went. But outside the drug store the next problem presented itself-money. After none seemed to be forthcoming, I asked the boy who somehow got the request across to his uncle. He then asked me in sign language

I shook my head and signed back "Two," As he started to dig out a two dollar bill. boy sat quietly until someone belatedly thought of all the complications that could arise if the bill came to more than that.

However, the boy and I trotted inside to the prescription counter only to find that if the hospital HAD phoned a pharmacy, it wasn't

It was odd

The girl at the counter didn't know what I was talking about and couldn't give me the prescription because she couldn't read the name which I couldn't tell her because I didn't know, even though I was the one with the prescription.

I agree it DID sound odd. but that's the way it was. Then the pharmacist came to have a look and said a prescription wasn't needed for that drug anyhow.

Once the stuff was bottled, labled, and presented, the final problem came up-how to relay directions "Take one tenspoonful four times a won't describe the charade that took place, but the message hopefully got across. And the prescription was only $1.99 so I was able to return a penny. Then away we went back to the hospital—all of us parting with a great relief, I think. STill, I wonder how they

Women still have a long way to go

Women are walking in the Sheridan College, as part of corridors of politics but International Women's Year haven't penetrated the inner boardrooms M.P. Flora MacDonald told predominately College recently.

Miss MacDonald, (P.C. Kingston and the Islands) sald that while women may have come a long way they still have a long way to go and have to learn how to handle power. She was speaking at activities.

"Women shy away from power and don't seek topfemale level positions. Until this is Sheridan overcome we won't change the status of power of correct ," she said.

When asked what it took to be a female politician, she replied, "A sense of curiosity, stamina, self-discipline, a sense of humor, the ability to put life in perspective and a seriousness about politics."

Freemans host farm vacations

Farm vacations were the topic when Mr. and Mrs. Frank Freeman were guests on the Betty Thompson show on CKCO television one day last week. Mr. and Mrs. Freeman have been taking guests at their farm for several years now and they're "swamped" with applications for this summer already. Guests started arriving last week.

More and more people are looking for a place to go, Mr. Freeman explains.

As well as people looking for a really peaceful and different holiday in the country, they take some guests who haven't been able to get hotel accommodations in

They have had guests from France, Switzerland, Italy, Holland and Hawaii as well as from all over Canada.
