To open in October 15-room residence at Hornby

Construction work is to begin shortly on a $250,000, 15-bedroom residence for mentally retarded adults at Hornby. It was announced Wednesday night.

The new facility will serve as a home for persons employed at the nearby ARC Industries (Adult Retraining Centre) on Steeles Ave. It should be ready Oct. 1.

An elated Russell Hunt, president of North Halton Association for the Mentally Retarded, told a news conference that "we've waited a long time for tonight."

"We're tremendously excited about it," he said of the residence under study for four years, "and if it was ready tomorrow, we could fill it. The need is here."

Five acres
The residence, which will not have any special name, is to be built on a five-acre site on the east side of Trafalgar Road, just north of Steeles Ave.

The president of the private and non-profit group said the residence would provide a "substantial saving" in dollars because it will lessen the amount of bussing that must be done.

At present, ARC buses circulate throughout North Halton to chauffeur the trainees to and from the Hornby workshop.

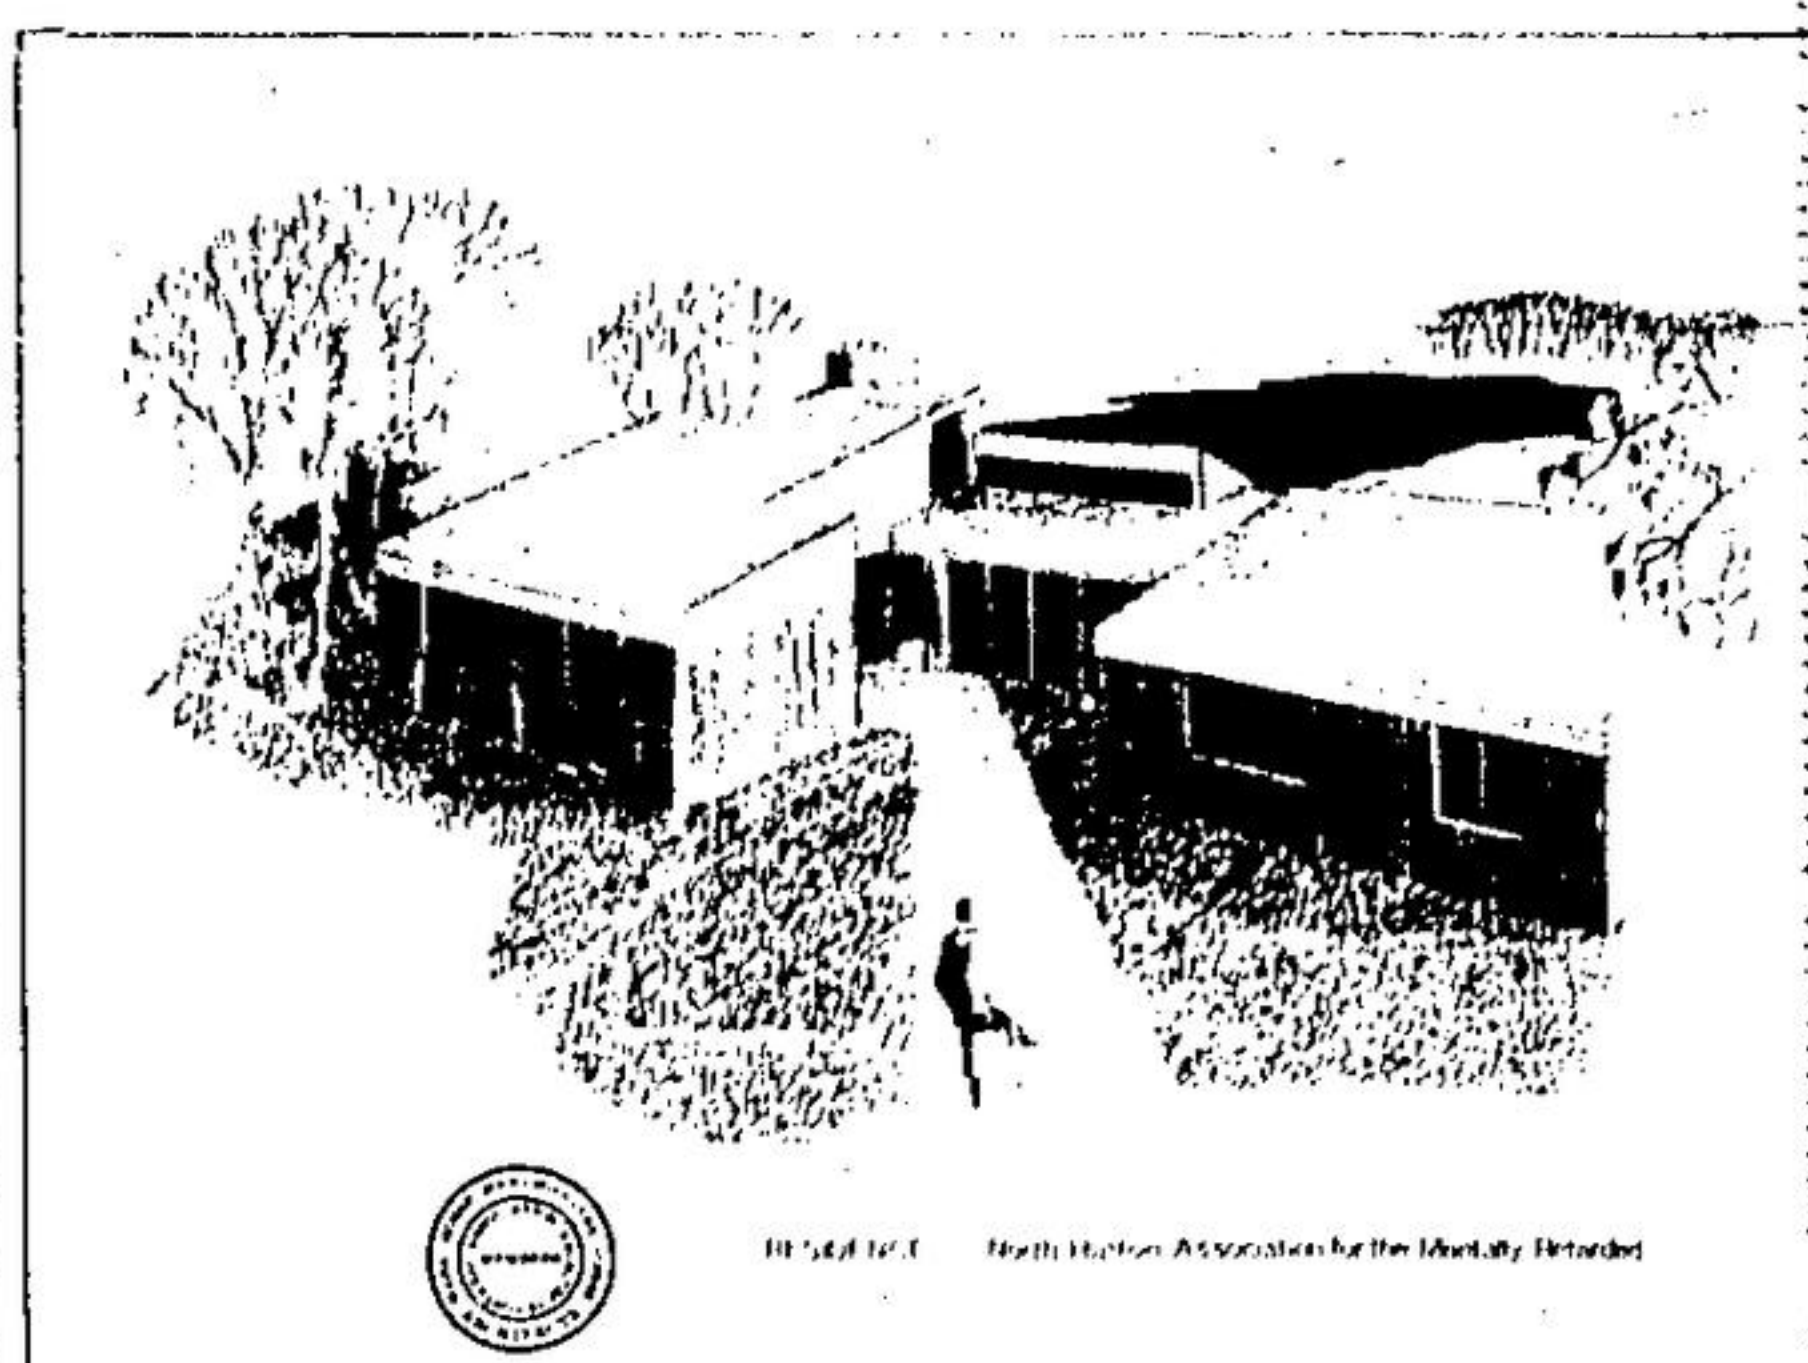

Mr. Hunt said the Ministry of Community and Social Services has agreed to provide 80 per cent of the $250,000 construction cost. That figure includes furnishings but not the landscaping.

Big deficit
He said this leaves the association with a "deficit of $60,000." Of this amount, between $30,000 and $35,000 has been contributed from existing association funds.

Mr. Hunt said the balance of $25,000 must be raised before construction ends in the fall. Members have "many ideas" for raising funds, including holding dances, raffles for prizes and soliciting donations from organizations like service clubs.

Construction work is to be done by CK & C Construction Ltd. of Toronto which submitted the lowest bid, while the architectural firm of Mark, Musselman, McIntyre and Combe of Toronto and Brantford designed the residence.

Architect Lawrence Combe of Toronto told the news conference the building was designed to look residential and that accounts for its "quite irregular" appearance.

Pond, stream
A pond will be built on the property, he said, as a stream runs through it.

Mr. Hunt, a trucking executive from Bramalea, said the provincial ministry will also cover 80 per cent of the residence's annual operating budget, with the association responsible for the balance which will be "a considerable amount."

The residence would be managed by a "rotating staff," he said, as permanent live-in instructors "haven't worked out" in other centres.

Leo Virus of Streetsville, a manager with Goodyear Rubber, has acted as chairman of the residence committee.

Auxiliaries help
Mr. Hunt explained that the various auxiliaries which support ARC Industries are to be active in furnishing the residence.

The Milton auxiliary will furnish the kitchen, Acton auxiliary is to provide major appliances other than for the kitchen, while Georgetown auxiliary will supply the linen. The Independent Order of Foresters (IOF) of Brampton has agreed to contribute a combination TV and stereo sound system for the TV room.

In response to a question from Vic Bristow of the Acton Lions Club who asked how service clubs could take "an active part" in setting up the residence, Mr. Hunt said it would be "terrific" if individual clubs could provide an estimated $800 to $1,000 to furnish the individual bedrooms.

Representatives from Milton Lions Club, Georgetown Legion and Acton Y's Men's Club expressed interest in the idea, and Mr. Hunt promised to provide them with detailed information on how they could help financially.

The association hopes teams of volunteers can be organized to do the landscaping work.

Residents will be selected by an admissions board. A portion of their disability pensions will be used to cover their board, and it will not be necessary for the families of the residents to pay anything.

Complains to board school buses unsafe

Sandra Stansbury of Burlington wants the Halton Board of Education to take steps to regulate unsafe school buses from being used for school tours.

In a letter to the board she recounted a recent trip to the Toronto Zoo in which she took part. The first of three buses pulled off the road when she said it became engulfed in smoke, the second pulled off when the tread on the tires ripped off and the third was said to have run into trouble with a dead battery.

A letter from Travelways (the bus firm) indicated the faulty tire had not been retreaded, the bus that became engulfed in smoke had overheated and the third bus was stopped when the engine was flooded.

Credits drivers
The firm pointed out that in each case the same thing could happen with new buses. Mrs. Stansbury credited the escape from personal property damage to the expertise of the drivers.

Trustee Bill Herd indicated that school buses weren't meant for that sort of long trip and he felt proper buses should be used.

Cedars turning brown blame a tiny worm

A tiny worm has caused white cedars in this town and district and the central portion of Southern Ontario to turn brown.

The tiny worm, cedar leaf miner, lives inside cedar branch tips, eats green tissue, and causes twigs to turn brown. Trees and hedges attacked in this way for two or three years become brown, sparse, and branches begin to die. But in spite of their poor appearance cedars are seldom killed in this way.

Epidemics of the cedar leaf miner occur in Ontario every 10 to 15 years, in spring. The miner takes the form of a tiny white moth throughout late June and July.

Attempts to control the insect are usually not practical on large numbers of cedars or acreages of older trees. According to Kenneth Turner, supervisor of the Ministry of Natural Resources, pest control section, control on hedges and smaller ornamental trees is possible by spraying with dimethoate (Cygon) in mid-August.

Cedar tree disease

Cedar Leaf Minor, a disease ravaging hundreds of acres of cedar trees, has got the Credit Valley Conservation Authority involved.

Authority staff members flew over this year and recently and, according to member H. P. Darraugh, "were absolutely appalled at the condition of the trees."

Chairman Grant Clarkson felt the Ministry of Natural Resources should have been telling the Authority about the epidemic before. He recommended the province be contacted to "stir somebody up."

Darraugh explained the minor is a small insect whose larvae stage burrows into the centre tissue of the leaf and is therefore not subject to poison. The disease is in its second year of infestation and is part of a 15 year cycle, said Darraugh.

"The Ministry says it will die out this year and we'll only lose some trees. But if it continues a third year we face devastation," a horrified Darraugh told the committee.

An expensive and dangerous spray is the common poison used to control the disease but Clarkson pointed out it was possible to use a non-toxic insecticide on the first stage—the white moths that appear at the end of June.

It was unanimously agreed the CVCA will contact the Ministry of Natural Resources immediately in order to proceed with an effective method of control.

Quick smoke

On June 11 a man ran out of the Royal Variety Store, Queen St., with a carton of cigarettes. He dropped them and kept on running. The matter is still under investigation by Acton police.
