

CUTTING HIS WAY through the first week of school at Robert Little is grade one pupil

Shannon Dowle. Shannon said he likes it there.

AN UNFAMILIAR occurrence in this day and age but the sling shot was used more often in ages past by youngsters. Speyside school principal Norm Howell did the right thing and informed pupils of the dangers of their use and of bringing dangerous objects to school.

It's back to school time and into classes

Photographs and design by Peter McCusker

Parents will be getting their hard-earned rest and teachers will be filling the bright enthusiastic youngsters with knowledge and wisdom over the next 10 months of classes. Children have once again stuffed their summer boredom into closets till next August when the summer-holiday-expectation-syndrome wears off once again. Children are always happy to return to school although they'll never admit it.

As the smell of autumn lingers, those too old to return or wrapped up in the workaday world, dream of the days when they were in the halls of knowledge, protected from the cement jungle and vicious realisms that haunt us daily.

For the student who graduated last spring, it is a new experience not to be returning. They try to adapt themselves to their work, rather than running around campus checking pubs, class schedules
