Booth loses lot levy fight

Councillor Roy Booth found no support for his try to reduce the new lot levies on rental units to $300, at Halton Hills council meeting, Monday night.

He contended that the shortage of rental units in town made it urgent that builders of apartments for rent should be encouraged. The previous lot levies saw $300 charged for a bachelor

Councillor Pat McKenzie said the report prepared jointly by the town staff, ustified the lot levies, "and didn't just pull figures out of the air."

Councillor Ernie Sykes said the high maintenance cost of rental apartments discouraged builders.

Councillor Harry Levy argued the reduction in rental apartment lot levies would not accomplish what Booth Councillor Ric Morrow sug- hoped. Only four areas of the audit report sparked questions from councillors. Councillor Don Gordon asked why the town's tax arrears stood at $418,000 and wondered if the guilty parties corporations or individuals. Treasurer Don Lougheed assured him that most of that money is still considered collectable and probably only $10,000 would have to be written off.

The auditors suggested the town set itself a goal and get the sick leave fund fully covered in a period of five to 10 years, "We just haven't had the money," explained the mayor, "and it will be the same next year."

Councillor Rick Day thought it was a credit to the town that the total number of municipal employees has dropped to 72. In 1973, before regional government, the town had 60 employees and there were 13 in Nassagaweya for a total of 73.
